Report That Lieut. Fay
Will Turn State's Evidence

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Robert Fay, the chief figure in the alleged German conspiracy to plant bombs on steamships carrying munitions to the allies from this port, and for which six men have been indicted, was taken before United States Attorney H. Snowden Marshall today.

Fay talked to William J. Flynn, chief of the secret service, for some time yesterday and was reported to have materially amplified the alleged confession he made to authorities when arrested. It was stated that Fay had offered to turn state's evidence when the five alleged co-conspirators are placed on trial.

Although no offer of immunity has yet been made to Fay in return for his testimony, it was believed that if he became a government witness he would be granted immunity and taken before the federal grand jury.

The government's attorneys plan to have new indictments against Fay and the other five filed as a result of the announcement by counsel for the defendants that the validity of the present indictments would be contested on the ground that United States statutes had been stretched to cover happenings on foreign vessels on the high seas.

SORES OF FOUR YEARS' STANDING VANISH

Has Unusual Story of Cure with New Herbal Skin Balm.

How many times have you laid awake watching for daylight and would be able to catch a wink of sleep, but would wake in a moment or so with skin that was sore with Eczema? What would you have not given for a cool skin, no itching, and refreshing sleep? If you are one of these sufferers, DEXMA will insure you the blessing of a healthy skin free from itching, soreness or burning. It is an herbal balm and has not a harmful ingredient in it.

Mrs. Rex, who lives at 131 Locust St., Toledo, O., says: "I have used DEXMA with great results and success for trouble which the doctors pronounced Eczema. I had sores on my head and limbs and have been this way for the past four years and tried many ways to obtain relief and found none, but am happy to say that this preparation has entirely cured me and I can and will endorse it to all that suffer as I did."

We are the only druggists in this town from whom DEXMA, the great herbal balm, can be secured. Ask us today.

VICTORY FOR HAVERHILL

LOWELL HIGH DEFEATED IN A GREAT GRIDIRON BATTLE BY SCORE OF 18 TO 7

Lowell high's reorganized football team which just began to hit its proper stride about two weeks ago, was defeated by the Haverhill high school eleven at Spaulding park Saturday afternoon in one of the most exciting gridiron battles seen here in a long time. The Lowell warriors forced their opponents to do all that was in them to win, and at that, victory did not smile on the boys from the Hilly City until the last two periods. As the Haverhill team is still in line for the state championship the defeat is not at all to be regretted by the local athletes, and in the two games yet to be played they should show the same spirit and dash that characterized their efforts on Saturday.

In Haverhill, Lowell went up against one of the most formidable school football machines in this part of the state. The reputation of the team is such that last week the management was offered $500 for a game in Chicago against the DePaul prep school on Dec. 5. Nevertheless, the Lowell warriors started the game on Saturday with a firm determination to bring home a victory, and they very nearly accomplished their purpose.

The Lowell team entered the game minus the services of Heathcock, the speedy halfback who sustained a wrenched ligament in last Thursday afternoon's hard workout. The team was also handicapped by a lack of substitutes of sufficient calibre to take the places of the regular players who gave all the strength that was in them during the entire game. On the other hand, Haverhill started the game with all its regulars and a large number of star substitutes. The substitutes were very frequently used, and they aided their team materially in the victory.

Saturday's thrilling battle brought out one very important feature in behalf of the local team. This was the attitude of the Lowell students who had sustained a reputation of being in a trance of indifference in respect to giving their team proper support on the gridiron. The New England baseball park has yet to be the scene of a more enthusiastic cheering section.

and the students who comprised it are to be commended on their work in cheering their team at all stages of the game.

The third base bleachers were set apart for the cheering section, and this was taxed to capacity by over 500 undergraduates in charge of teachers of the school. The students, including boys and girls, were arranged so as to represent the letters "L.H.S." and they formed one of the prettiest pictures ever witnessed at the park. Time and again their cheering had its effect on their team when the Haverhill eleven menaced the Lowell goalposts, and the team responded by holding on every occasion. The final score was: Haverhill 15, Lowell 7. Lynch made Lowell's touchdown and Boane kicked the goal. Haverhill's touchdowns were made on fumbles.

DIED OF HIS INJURIES

HUGH H. DRISKO FATALY BURNED BY EXPLOSION OF LOCOMOTIVE BOILER

CALAIS, Me., Nov. 15.—Hugh H. Drisko, of Columbia Falls, who was badly injured Saturday night by explosion of a locomotive boiler on the Maine Central railroad near Agass's junction, died in a hospital here today. He was 23 years of age and was principal of Milltown grammar school.

William E. Blake, conductor of the train, died last night from his injuries. E. L. Kinsland of Princeton, another passenger in the car with Mr. Drisko, also was injured.

MURDER OF HUSBAND

MRS. MARY A. BURNS OF NOTTINGHAM ON TRIAL AT PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 15.—The first trial of a woman for murder in Rockingham Co. in many years was set for today when Mrs. Mary A. Burns of Nottingham was called upon to face the charge of having killed her husband. Burns died at his home on Dec. 12, 1914. The medical referee pronounced death due to poisoning and at first the authorities held to the theory that he had committed suicide. After an investigation Mrs. Burns was arrested.

At her preliminary hearing evidence was introduced to the effect that she had purchased poison in Manchester three days before her husband's death. After her indictment last April she was taken to the state hospital for the insane for observation. Upon the report of the superintendent that she was sane, she was brought back to the county jail in August. Jealousy is advanced by the authorities as the motive for the alleged crime.

COUNTY COMMISSION MET

Brief Session at the Court House on Gorham Street This Morning—Will Meet Again Tomorrow

The regular third Monday of the month meeting of the county commissioners was held at the local court house this morning with Commissioners Gould and Barlow in attendance. Only a few routine matters were discussed. Tomorrow the commissioners will meet in conjunction with the members of the prison commission in Cambridge to consider the advisability of employing the prisoners at the Lowell jail on some kind of manual labor. The commissioners also have a meeting scheduled for tomorrow afternoon in Boston.

NASHUA STRIKE FOR STUDY OF BIBLE

Strikers Reject Mill Agents' Offer—Refuse to Return to Work

NASHUA, N. H., Nov. 15.—At a meeting of the textile strikers in Hensley hall yesterday afternoon they rejected the proposition presented Saturday night by State Labor Commissioner John S. R. Davis over the signatures of the mill agents, that the strikers return to work, except the law-breakers, and that the agents make individual adjustment of conditions and wages which can be shown to be inequitable when compared with other textile centers.

The strikers told that the only plan which they will approve is that submitted by Commissioner Davis last week, which the agents rejected, specifying that after the employees go back differences be settled by the state board of arbitration.

Before the vote was taken a conference was held at which Organizer Thomas F. McMahon of the United Textile workers and the strike committee were present with Commissioner Davis, who further explained the proposition. Organizer McMahon presided at the meeting which was addressed by Mayor Bostonick, who is making a nation-wide appeal for aid for the strikers.

Before leaving for home, Commissioner Davis said he had gone as far in the matter as he can at this time and is now awaiting the verdict of the agents, stating their reason for refusing arbitration. He added that he came to Nashua Saturday with the plan which the strikers rejected yesterday, at the request of Gov. Rolland H. Spaulding.

The mill agents went to Concord Saturday on a suggestion coming through Mayor Frank Knox of Manchester.

A considerable number of operatives left on eastbound cars last night to take jobs in other cities.

PASTOR RESIGNS

Rev. Frank G. Alger Gives Up Pawtucket Church Pastorate

Rev. Frank G. Alger, pastor of the Pawtucket Congregational church for the past eight years, has tendered his resignation to take effect after the first Sunday in January. His letter of resignation was read at the close of the services Sunday last by Rev. Allan C. Fernin who had exchanged pulpits with Mr. Alger. The letter of resignation was as follows:

Lowell, Mass., Nov. 13, 1915.

To the Members of the Pawtucket Congregational Church and Parish.

Dear Friends—Eight years ago I came to you as your minister. It seems wise to me to lay aside now, for a year, the duties and responsibilities of the pastorate, therefore I offer to you my resignation as pastor of the Pawtucket church, and none as my concluding Sunday with you, our next communion, the first Sunday in January.

I take this opportunity of expressing my gratification at our united life, a fellowship that means friendship. I thank you for the many for your co-operation with me in the work of these years, for the consideration with which you have received my mistakes, and for the many appreciative words you have given me, for beyond my deserving of my pulpit work.

It is a source of gratification that another may take up the work under such favorable conditions. Our Sunday morning service has never had a better attendance than during the past year; the Sunday school has the largest recorded enrollment in its history, and the present members of the spiritual life, and increased earnestness in the work of the Christian endeavor society give me very great joy.

A pastor whose thought is constantly for his people must necessarily feel a strong attachment for those with whom he has lived and worked, whose joys and sorrows he has been permitted to share, and for those whom he has had the sacred privilege of receiving into the membership of the church. In this imperfect enumeration I would not omit the privilege it has been to give the gospel message to the families of this parish, but also to the large body of boys and girls from the Ayr Home. God bless each one of them. The broad front of such a rooted relationship is one of the hard experiences in the life of the minister. And yet this course compels itself to seeking and prayerful and deliberate judgment. I ask you, therefore, to take action upon my resignation, and join with me in calling an ecclesiastical council for my dismissal.

It is my wish that we may make these closing weeks the best we shall have spent together; the best we have given to Christ and the church, the best in the quality of that service, and the best in our fellowship one with another.

Watching for the church a life whose thought and activities will ever be according to the divine guidance, and praying will send you a minister like Christ and the church, the best who will lead you into rich pastures and self-sacrificing service.

I am sincerely yours in Christ, Frank G. Alger.

The Pawtucket church has made steady progress during Mr. Alger's time as pastor and the announcement yesterday was given for genuine regret.

SOCIAL AND FRATERNAL

An important meeting of Division 1, A. O. U. was held yesterday afternoon in Librarian hall. Chairman Henry Smith of the smoke talk committee reported all arrangements were completed for the social to take place Thursday evening. An invitation from the board of trade to attend the industrial night was accepted. Financial secretary Sheehan's report of the financial resources of the division for the past six months showed the treasury to be in a prosperous condition. Three applications for membership were acted upon and one new member was admitted.

Evening Star Rebekah Lodge

At the meeting of Evening Star Rebekah lodge, 30, I. O. O. F., held Saturday evening arrangements were made for the celebration of the 35th anniversary of the lodge, which will be held Saturday evening, Nov. 27. The following committee is in charge: Maude E. Green, Lillian M. Jacobs, Lena E. Sawyer, Georgia M. Queen, Etta J. Thompson, Nettie M. Vinal, Etta J. Spaulding, Elsie E. Andrews, Mary Anne E. Howell, Irene A. Collins, Mary R. Davis, Elizabeth A. Kershaw, Chas. C. Thompson. The entertainment will be in charge of Mrs. Florence M. Weinbeck.

The district deputy president, Mrs. Annie E. Crouse of Lawrence, and her suite are to be the guests of the evening.

After the business meeting a beautiful contest was enjoyed under the efficient management of Wilford G. Bowen. The two teams were captained by Charles C. Thompson and Mark H. Sawyer, respectively. Capt. Sawyer's team won by a score of 50 to 40. Capt. Sawyer also received the prize for the highest individual score, while Mrs. J. E. Fitchman was a close second. Mr. Elvira H. Andrews was the third prize and Mrs. Etta J. Thompson received the much-needed consolation prize.

CONDEMN CONSCRIPTION

CO. G. IRISH VOLUNTEERS. ADOPTS STRONG RESOLUTIONS AT MEETING IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—A vigorous condemnation of proposed British conscription in Ireland was voiced by Military company G. Irish Volunteers of Division 1, A. O. U., at their meeting in the hall, 1641 Washington street, last night.

The resolutions of protest also included a resolve to support financially and physically the National Irish Volunteers. The meeting was attended by many Irish members of the conscription, which acted as the military council for Cardinal O'Connell on the occasion of his return from Rome some years ago.

There are about 100 members in the company, many of them war veterans, and they are to a man, so speakers at the meeting said, in the resolution of the meeting, which read the resolutions, which were passed unanimously.

CITY PLANNING LIVES

City planning is not dead nor is it sleeping even though, as known in this city, it is a term vague and generally misunderstood. Not so long ago, indeed, with a blare of trumpets, as it were, a city planning board was organized, but its members soon discovered the utility of making plans which never went beyond the planning stage. The board had no money to put its plans into practice and it had no authority to compel others to do so and so the planning board has sunk into silence and inactivity. We still have the board but, through no fault of its own, it is mighty short in achievement, and it is too sensible to waste energy in fruitless talking and suggesting.

Yet city planning lives and in other communities it does not sleep. Even in Lowell, its principles are getting wider recognition, for the industrial exposition that started this morning is a splendid indication of its possibilities. Some optimistic citizens may refer to the Dunster street extension as a further illustration of its advantages, but wise city planning stipulates at the outset that a city should not attempt what it cannot afford, and that the more important things must come first.

In the neighboring city of Boston—where, logically, ought to set the pace for all cities of Massachusetts—an exhibition of city planning has been opened with the object of assisting the movement and giving it a new impetus. One of the side issues is a conference between leading men in public and private affairs who have ideas as to what cities must do to progress. This has drawn forth some splendid criticisms, study of which would benefit all cities where there is a need for city planning—and where is the perfect city?

A few of the ideas gathered at random from the addresses of the delegates to the conference will prove of interest; Ralph Adams Cram, the noted architect, who, by the way, is a member of the Boston city planning board, declared at the outset: "The planning board should first make the city whole—its sanitary and homelike—then it can resort to the beautification. The planning board's real object is, not bigger cities, but better cities." What city would not be benefited by such a practical ideal?

Governor Walsh spoke in a like vein, emphasizing the practical side of city planning and discounting its aesthetic aims. "The scheme is wholly utilitarian," he said, "and is not, except in a very remote degree, concerned with the mere esthetic features of city and town life." Mayor Curley voiced something which is very applicable to local conditions when he said: "The chief benefit of a planning board is that it changes the perspective of the public in the matter of civic improvements. The average city or town official is too busy with his own duties properly to look into the future and the planning board biases the trail for future and proper development." The mayor also said that he hopes to see the adoption of some plan to provide money for carrying out the suggestions of the planning board. Other things discussed and illustrated in some phase were: public conveniences, recreation, education, encouragement of industries, municipal finance, abolition of slums, fire prevention, etc.

The weakness of the city planning ideal is that its field is too large and its authority too small. The ideal is splendid, but it is hard to conceive of its working satisfactorily in the average city. Its only constructive policy seems to be the forming of public opinion, but public opinion cannot work miracles when the public is so careless concerning municipal administration and the type of men elected to office. Unfortunately there is slight reason to suppose that city planning boards anywhere in New England are more successful than here. They are squarely up against selfish political control and public indifference. Waste the day when they are city planning boards in fact as well as in name.

MORE FREIGHT CARS

What is the best barometer of general business? One says bank clearings, another market reports, another the employment situation, and so on. There are many reliable tests of general conditions and when they point to prosperity all the wallings in the world cannot bring depression; when, on the other hand, they point to bad business, all of the world's boostings in the world cannot bring prosperity. The country notes with gratification that on all sides there are present indications of solid and increasing prosperity.

Not the least of these business barometers is the reported shortage of freight cars—a shortage that has become acute. Last April the railroads estimated that over three hundred thousand cars were lying idle on the tracks. On Nov. 1 there were only 26,600 and the supply is fast becoming exhausted because of the heavy crops which are now being moved. A large reserve is generally kept for the coal traffic, and this year it will be found insufficient. Consequently the railroads are putting in orders for increased equipment.

This naturally leads to an increase in the output of steel products which depend almost wholly in normal times

WEARING OUT

There is much to support the oft-mentioned theory that the allies are permitting the Germans to take most of the offensive in the war, realizing that it is a wearing out process and that the more the Germans exercise now the sooner will they be without resources. To date, Germany has shown an energy and ability which has had no precedent in history, but as compared with the allies it is at a tremendous disadvantage. It is far more limited in men, munitions, food and all the supplies that are necessary to the life of a nation. Time is with the allies, and with the extension of the field of combat, Germany is forced to throw more and more of her reserves into the actual conflict. There is enormous deterioration in the various fronts and this must be constantly offset or Germany will be forced to give up her offensive and fight a losing battle. The allies feel that they can afford to wait while Germany must strike swiftly and strongly in order to change the fortunes of war.

True Friendship

Two boys, one the possessor of a permit, were fishing on a certain stream when a game keeper suddenly appeared from a thicket. The lad with the permit uttered a cry of fright, dropped his rod and ran off at top speed. The gamekeeper was led a swift chase. Then, worn out, the boy halted. The man sized him by the arm and said between pants: "Have you a permit to fish on this stream?" "Yes, to be sure," said the boy, quietly. "You have? Then show it to me."

The boy drew the permit from his pocket. The man examined it and frowned in perplexity and anger. "Why did you run when you had this permit?" he asked.

"To let the other boy get away," was the reply. "He didn't have none."

fine appear a picture and sketch of A. E. Chapman, a southern California, who knows how to rid a whole community of flies. He has some rather original ideas, which may offer a suggestion or two for local use. Following is an extract from the article about him: "Mr. Chapman says that the bait is a very important part of fly traps, for this special bait must be more enticing than the odors from the kitchen. He has found that, although a great variety of foods can be used successfully, the attractiveness of any bait varies with the season. A food that drew thousands of flies at one time of year will not interest them in the least at other times. Fresh fruits in season are always good, but in the early summer the only really satisfactory bait is ground meat sprinkled with formaldehyde to keep it fresh. In his study of the habits of flies, Mr. Chapman has discovered one characteristic which he believes not only has enabled the fly to propagate its species but also has saved the human race from extinction by this pest. He has learned that young flies up to the end of the two-week period during which they lay no eggs have no taste nor desire for any food but the faintest and freshest they can find; but that at the end of this period their taste undergoes a complete and radical change. Fly a case provision of nature that the new desire only the kind of a food that can be found in refuse heaps decaying matter or other places where instinct bids them lay their eggs. When you bait with stale fish, says Mr. Chapman, you fill your trap with old flies that in all probability have laid their full quota of eggs and whose days are numbered. In the beginning of a campaign a number of traps should be baited this way, but after you have got the advantage of the old flies, the majority of the traps should be baited with the nicest and freshest food and fruit available. Thus you will be sure to catch the young flies before the laying period begins."

BRUTALITY OF THE TURKS

Man From Asiatic Turkey Tells of Horrible Atrocities—Had Difficulty in Getting Here

The first word spoken in this city of the atrocities by the Turkish authorities by one who has witnessed them was spoken at the First Congressional church last night. The speaker was Hrant Dink, a young man from Anatolia, Turkey. Asiatic Turkey, and his auditors represented all of the Congregational churches in the city. Hrant had a narrow escape from Turkish horrors. He arrived in this country a few short weeks ago, having succeeded in getting away from Marsovan. He left there, he said, after the Armenian population had been sent into exile, or to death or worse. He traveled five days by wagon to Angora, and was delayed there by government officials who took his passport. His passport was finally restored and went by the Anatolian railway to Constantinople.

"On the way to Constantinople," he said, "we saw fully 50,000 Armenian women and children who were being driven into the wilderness, or who were to be taken to harems."

"The plot to exterminate the Armenian population of Turkey is a deep and systematic one," he said, "and it has been carried out for many years. The first century never went through more terrible ordeals for their faith than have the Armenians who were taken bodily to Turkish harems. I had supposed it was impossible that such crimes as I have witnessed could occur in the 20th century. I did not suppose that even in my days I would see women huddled together in a room, as I saw in the principal rooms of our college in Marsovan, to be taken away to worse than death. And when Mrs. Morgenthau, wife of our ambassador, heard of this, she refused to allow us to communicate with officials and they said to her: 'This amuses us.' I had never believed that I would hear of such a statement being made."

"Last April I was surprised to learn that one of our Armenian professors had been arrested by the gendarmes together with several hundred other Armenians. He had, at one time, been a member of the National Armenian society, and some of those arrested with him had, also. But the young Turks had recognized this society, had considered it wholly legal, and for eight years there had not been the slightest objection to its existence. But it was a part of the policy of extermination which had been decided upon to arrest these men. They were kept in prison for six weeks, and were cruelly tortured there. They were given the bastinado and were exposed to typhus, and finally the word that he was dead. Not long afterward the was carried off into captivity, and whether she be dead or alive at the present time I do not know."

"During the month of May all of the Armenian young men were enlisted in the army, but they were not allowed to have arms. They were put to work digging trenches or in the transport service. It was asserted by the authorities that this was done for political reasons. A few of those who were able to buy their exemption by paying 40 Turkish pounds were allowed to escape such service."

"In June all persons having firearms were told to give them up to the police. Now it was not an unusual thing for Armenians, as well as Turks, to have weapons in their possession, for after dark it was sometimes quite unsafe for the population to be unprotected. All but a few of the Ar-

HEALTH INSURANCE

Some people are naturally thin. There is also a natural pallor but most people who are both thin and pale are far from well and they need a tonic.

Many people neglect to take a tonic until they get so sick that a tonic is not sufficient just because the demand of the debilitated body is not insistent enough. The pale face, weak nerves, enfeebled digestion are neglected until the point where pain or actual breakdown requires medical treatment.

A tonic taken in time is the best health insurance. It supports the overtaxed system, the worried nerves until nature can make repairs. Build up the blood and you are sending renewed health and strength to every part of the body. The appetite is improved, the digestion is toned up, there is new color in the cheeks and lips, you worry less, become good natured where before you were irritable and you find new joys in living.

Tonic treatment is useful in dyspepsia, rheumatism, anemia and nervous disorders. In many cases it is all the medical treatment that is required.

Free booklets on the blood, nerves and diet will be sent on request by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, "King Up the Blood." It is free.

Science will be richer after the war, which is a great incentive to scientific discovery. Unfortunately, at the present time the new knowledge is mostly used for the purposes of mutual destruction, but this will be a passing phase. Things learned in the conduct of perperances and exterminations and trench deadlocks will make the world brighter and better. War, however, has made wonderful strides. Anger, emotions are affected with little regard, and with slight resultant loss of life, and many things hitherto considered impossible have been accomplished. Even in the busy of war, these things are noted and recorded with scientific accuracy, and they will be of use to the medical students of the future in the great triumphs of a new epoch.

Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Montpelier, Vt. — "We have great faith in your remedies. I was very irregular and was tired and sleepy all the time, would have cold chills, and my hands and feet would be numb. My stomach bothered me, I had pain in my side and a bad headache most of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me lots of good and I now feel fine. I am regular, my stomach is better and my pains have all left me. You can use my name if you like. I am proud of what your remedies have done for me." — Mrs. MARY GAUTHIER, 21 Ridge St., Montpelier, Vt.

An Honest Dependable Medicine: It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for nearly forty years, and to-day hold a record for thousands upon thousands of actual cures, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to any of the women whose testimonial letters we are constantly publishing. They will tell you their experience, and give you confidence to try the medicine.

EARL OF SEAFELD DEAD

LONDON, Nov. 14.—James Ogilvie, Earl of Seafeld, has been killed in action in France.

The Earl of Seafeld, who was born in 1875, was the 11th of his line, was a captain of the Third Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, special reserve, when the war began. He was married in 1905 to Miss Nina Townsend, daughter of Dr. J. P. Townsend, justice of the peace of the colony of New Zealand, who survives him with a daughter. The heir to the title is his brother, Hon. Trevor Ogilvie Grant. His daughter succeeds to the Scottish peerages.

THE ART OF WEARING JEWELRY

Jewels and the opera have been the theme for many a dissertation on gems, wealth and costuming, but the main reason for jewels at the opera has generally been overlooked. The fact is that sitting in a theatre or opera box is like sitting for one's photograph with all the rest of the house looking on. Jewels must be elaborate to be seen at that range, and gowns must be striking to be noticeable at all. Bare shoulders, high collars and sleeveless bodices will be dominating notes in these pictures this winter and there is more chance than ever for showing off one's handsomest jewels. Bands will be worn low about the brow, collars and heavily gemmed necklaces about the throat, rings set with enormous gems, bracelets anywhere on the arm from the shoulder to the wrist, earrings that are really eye-pendants, long with swinging gems—all these and more will be worn. Brocade velvets, embroidered satins and both satin and velvet combined in multi-colored flower patterns will hold forth in all their splendor. With black as a relief these damask satins will make their mark if only and diamonds are used on the gleaming white of the shoulders and arms. Cut onyx in collar and bracelets, with the sparkle and fire of large diamonds and the soft, lustrous sheen of pearls, will gain admiration as nothing else could with these brilliant opera gowns. Let the plain-toned costume be worn with the colored gem and the many-colored gown with the clear white of the diamonds.

A noteworthy example of fine jewelry is a pair of bracelets of carved platinum set with diamonds and emeralds for the foil of orange velvet, and another equally attractive arrangement was made in cerise velvet and sapphires.

The new silks include a feather-weight charmeuse, tafetas noted for their novel patterns and gorgeous colors, and the list of corded silks, gros-grain, surah, higos, moire, faille, gros-velvet, and another equally attractive arrangement was made in cerise velvet and sapphires.

The silks are heavier in most instances than the silks, but to be contrary to the rule, there are to be found some exquisite satins of fine light weight that will fall in folds like the softest chiffon. The plain, solid colors are here, also interrupted in their long season of favoritism to make way for the figures, stripes and appliqued embroidered and brocade satins.

Damasse, one of the luxurious tinsel and satin brocades, is the perfect material against which to contrast jewels. Two or more colors may be used in its weave with a gold or silver thread, and this gives the keynote for the jewelry.

All the brilliant embroideries are adaptable and easily contrasted in jewels on account of the numerous colors they employ, and they are excellent as a finishing on an otherwise solid-color costume to throw jewels into relief.

Other Fabrics

Chiffons, tulle and laces and all sheer fabrics for evening wear will only take the faintest mountings as their accompaniment. Large gems and heavy settings are out of the question with such materials. Well designed jewels set with scintillating faceted gems will look their best on such grounds, but if there is the least amount of clumsiness or solid looking heaviness in gems or mountings, the effect is ruined. This line of goods is combined best with platinum wire work, which, as all the leading colors are available, may be set with any faceted, transparent or translucent gem.

The main aim to work for and to always bear in mind is to have continuity of idea throughout between material and jewelry.

One could give many examples of consistency between jewelry and costume, but the manner of gaining the desired effect is endless. It is what women are going to wear as a background for the manufacturer's wares that is going henceforth to control his output, and this season, with very decided tastes already shown, is an excellent time to put appropriate jewelry into use.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Missouri has six women architects. Philadelphia has a woman's hockey league.

St. Louis City High school girls are taught millinery.

Danish women will vote for the first time next July.

The mean age for marriage among women is 25.50.

Kansas women can vote at every election in that state.

Women who do general housework in Montreal, N. J., receive from $22 to $25 per month.

Glasgow, Scotland, has appointed a woman, Miss Emily Miller, to its police force.

Miss Melba recently gave a concert in Montreal which netted the Red Cross fund over $10,000.

Princess Arthur, of Connaught, is considered one of the smartest attired women of all the Royalties.

In Japan the lover gives his sweetheart a piece of beautiful silk for a snash instead of an engagement ring.

Several young women of well known New York families have entered art schools to study interior decorating and costume designing.

Queen Marguerite of Savoy, mother of the king of Italy, has written a patriotic hymn which is dedicated to the wounded Italian soldiers.

London now has a "League for Marrying of Broken Heroes." All patriotic women in England now unmarried are urged to join the league.

French women are now having the pictures of their husbands and relations at the front photographed on their arms and chests.

The new social secretary at the White House in Washington is Miss Edith W. Benham, who succeeds Miss Isabelle Hagner, who is about to become a bride.

Although she is blind, Miss Hatlie Madrox has been employed in the mail bag repair shop of the post office department at Washington for the past 25 years.

Margaret Harwood, who was graduated from Radcliffe in 1907 and later at Harvard Observatory in 1912, has been appointed for an indefinite period as a fellow of the Nantucket Marine Mitchell association, where she has held the astronomical fellowship award since 1912. She is studying this in the University of California and will take up her duties at Nantucket next year at the Nantucket observatory.

LADY LOOKABOUT

I smile to myself when I take up a certain Boston paper and look at the cartoons of the Bay State hearings in which City Solicitor Hennessy figures so prominently. It had never struck me before, but in "Norman's" sketches, Mr. Hennessy's resemblance to "The Man Who Made Sweet Adeline Famous" is more than passing—it is extraordinary. Incidentally, Mr. Hennessy is receiving much favorable press notice for the well trained mind he brings to bear when the occasion arises.

The Damfounded Man

Click, click, clickety-click, sounded a pair of tiny French heels on the new carpet sidewalk on Merrimack street, and the faintest little lady, clad in a satiny brown chiffon broadcloth with lots and lots of fur and more buttons, trotted into the square. Turning her back to the line-up of curbstone gentry (I almost wrote "gentlemen.") Would it have been funny? She studied D. L. Page's window of wonderful dainties. At the same moment my glance fell upon one of the aforesaid gentry. "Attention!" was written all over him. His shoulders well braced, his head thrust forward, you could almost feel the dotted lines that shot from eyes already popping out of his head to the little lady's French heels. Involuntarily, my glance followed his, and at once I discerned the cause of his agitation.

She wore pantaloons! Tiny and modest and trimmed with fur, they peeped shyly from below the hem of the gown they matched. They were the first I had seen outside a fashion bank, and I was trying to decide whether or not I liked them, when my gaze returned to the man in the story. The dotted lines were very much in evidence, and only that his eyes were well anchored in their sockets I fear he would have lost them altogether. Positively they were hanging out on his cheeks, and if the little lady had not at that moment succumbed to the call of caramels and walnut creams, and entered the store, I should have trembled for his sight. I was not jealous, either, for even now, nearly a week later, I have not decided whether I shall adopt the style, despite its attractiveness.

P. S.—You understand, of course, that the man simply wanted to be able to tell his wife all about it. Apart from that, you could tell by his very attitude he was not interested a bit. He qualified all right, I'll vouch for that!

The Industrial Show

The promoters of the Industrial exposition in progress at the Casino show a creditable spirit of far-sightedness in inviting the school children of the city to be their guests. It is most desirable that the adults of the city become acquainted with the resources, invested capital, products, industries and possibilities of their home city, but it is of vastly greater importance that these be fixed in the minds of the boys and girls who shall be the men and women of tomorrow, and in whose hands, after the city prospers. There always has been a tendency among the youth of the city to deride what they in their ignorance and inexperience were pleased to call the lack of opportunity in Lowell. This false idea has gradually given way to a respect for the home city and her possibilities, and the credit should be given where it is fully belongs—to the Lowell board of trade, and its competent secretary, Mr. John H. Murphy. Through that active body Lowell has come to be recognized as "The City of Opportunity," and the results are to be seen on all sides in increased prosperity.

Admires the Soldier

Morning after morning for the past few days, I have been awakened by the heavy rumble of army wagons on the street outside my house. Great, strong vehicles they are, drawn by two and sometimes four strong mules. A soldier in khaki holds the reins, and in nearly every case he seems hardly more than a boy. One of them I have seen two or three times, and his round young face and his broad young shoulders return to my mind again and again through the day. He whistles a tender, haunting little air, always the same one, and not muscular enough to recognize it, but this I know: It is not a martial air as one would naturally expect. Instead, it hints of love, and hope, and someone waiting far off, and something deep within me rises up in silent protest at the thought of that youth and hundreds of thousands of others like him who may soon be called upon to give up their lives on the battle field. Truly, it is a sobering thought, but one which persistently forces itself upon each of us at this time.

The Jitney Cold

The most fashionable ailment in a certain section of the city at the present time is the "jitney cold." All you have to do to get one is just forget to wear your raccoon coat some day when you board one of the vehicles. It is amazingly easy. The symptoms are those of an ordinary cold, only much more so. First aid may be rendered by a pocket handkerchief. Scientific packing has done much to reduce the liability, but the chances of escaping it wholly are small if in the process of packing you draw a position in the top layer. There is an excellent opportunity for some enterprising young man, commercially inclined, to place on the market a "jitney cough drop," guaranteed to have all the accomplishments of the ordinary cough drop, plus the certainty of collecting bent limbs, curvature of the spine and cracked ribs. Who is going to do it?

As to Barring Aliens

One cannot but feel that Henry L. Higginson, a leading broker of Boston, and whose firm handled the Anglo-French loan, strikes a popular note when he advocates barring from this country all aliens whose governments will not allow them to renounce loyalty to their native lands. Naturalization is made altogether too easy for the alien. All he has to do is declare his intention of becoming a bona fide citizen, and he becomes a citizen with all the privileges of a native born, save that of holding the office of chief executive of the nation. At the same time, his native land may not look upon his allegiance to the land of his birth as something to be laid aside at will. Some nations refuse to release its citizens from loyalty to it. This was the real cause of the War of 1912. England insisted that no British subject could become an American.

Such citizens are a liability to the United States rather than an asset, and they may well be barred from our shores.

LADY LOOKABOUT.

THE FRENCH MAID SAYS:

PROPER CARE OF YOUR SHOES

"Oh dear, my shoes get shabby so quickly," sighed Marjorie, as she watched Marie so very carefully put away some of Madame's fine footgear.

"Perhaps you don't take proper care of your shoes," ventured Marie. "There are ways and means by which boots and shoes can be made to last twice as long as ordinarily. For instance, never put them in a fire to dry. When you come in, if they are damp, fill them with dry sand and stand them in a warm room, but not near a fire or intense heat."

"Boots trees may be purchased and they will make your boots last much longer and they will keep their shape almost until really worn to shreds. It is a good idea to waterproof boots before wearing them and it is easily done. Buy some clear copal varnish and a soft brush. Give the soles a thin coating with the varnish and set the boots on a shelf. With the soles upward, to dry. Then, in two days, give them another coat and let that get quite dry."

"Many people throw away boots and shoes when they have plenty of good use still in them. If brown boots become very stained and greasy, cover them with French chalk and leave for twenty-four hours, then wipe off and polish with brown shoe polish. Shabby brown boots can also be blackened by a mixture of a ounce of ivory black and the juice of a lemon and gradually adding enough warm vinegar to make it the consistency of thin cream."

"Clean the boots with a little warm water and soap, then let them dry and paint with the dye. Let them alone for a day and then give them another coat. Then leave another twenty-four hours and give them a polish with black boot cream."

IN MILADY'S BOUDOIR

THE TIRED BUSINESS GIRL

How many there are every night of the tired business girls who drag themselves wearily home at night with aching feet, nervous brains, and suffering bodies. They are far too tired to pay any attention to their person, too tired to take up dust for their person which might result in a very great added measure of beauty.

As tired as you are, as disinterested as you feel, try this method of refreshing yourself and you will be delighted at the result. If you have bath time or cannot stand a cold bath, bathe the face and arms in hot water and then in icy cold, alternating several times. The feet, too, should be bathed in cold water with a sprinkling of salt. Many prefer to add half a cup of vinegar to the water when the feet are tired.

Lay aside your business dress and slip into something soft and fluffy. Arrange your hair loosely. Put fresh stockings on the refreshed feet and a pair of soft slippers. You will be surprised at the invigorating change that has taken place. The constant practice of this habit will make it soon become a pleasure.

Instead of throwing yourself upon the bed and then appearing at the dinner or supper table with ink stained fingers and tousled hair, you will be an ornament to the family gathering, and a comfort to yourself and all others around you.

WHAT THE COOK SAYS

I found Cook in the dining room this morning polishing off the dining table on which a bad mark had been left from a hot dish. "Why the mark is all off, Cook?" I exclaimed. "What did you use?"

"Oh, she answered, 'Just a thin paste made of salad oil and salt. I spread it over the marked place and left it for an hour or more, then rubbed it off with a soft cloth."

I told Cook that her pudding the night before was splendid but I was puzzled as to how she steamed it without a steamer. "That was very easy," she answered. "When a pudding is to be steamed and a steamer to fit the saucepan is not available, after putting the pudding in a well greased mould I place a piece of paper over the top and put it in a saucepan with enough boiling water to cover about half way up the mould. Then I cover closely and keep the water simmering until the pudding is cooked."

The Cook complained this morning that the ice man did not call and therefore there was no ice for ice water.

"But," she said smilingly, "I have made some for water just the same." She filled an unglazed earthenware jug with cold water and stood it in a soup plate filled with water. Then she soaked a clean kitchen towel with cold water and wrung it around the jug, allowing the ends of the cloth to rest in the soup plate. In this way it became icy cold in a very short time.

I found Cook grinding away at the mangle machine, and I remarked that I thought she was going to take it apart and clean it before she used it again. "You don't have to do that," she said. "I know of a better way to clean the machine. It is very difficult to clean the inside so I am grinding stale pieces of bread through it. This collects all grease, fat and skin from the small knives. Then I wipe it thoroughly with a clean cloth."

"Are you not going to rub the cut glass?" I asked Cook, as I found her drying my most valuable pieces with a cloth. "There is no need of it," she answered. "As I always wash the cut glass in the following way: Place the article in a pan of soft water to which a little bluing has been added, and scrub it with a brush. Dry with a soft cloth and you can get a fine polish without rubbing."

When I started to leave, Cook grabbed a towel and began to swing it wildly about her head. I thought she had gone crazy but she soon explained her actions.

"If a room becomes filled with smoke," she said, "a towel, dipped in vinegar and water and wrung out, then taken and thrown about one's head through the room, will remove all smoke in a few moments. A small portion of vinegar in a very little water will be sufficient for the purpose."

As I went to the kitchen today Cook was making soap jelly which she says she likes to have on hand, as it is much better for many things than the hard soap. She says it should not be made too long beforehand, as it kept more than a week, it loses its strength.

"The quantities used are a quarter of a pound of soap to each quart of water. Take, then, as much soap as you think will be needed and shred it fine with a knife, putting it into a saucepan with the water to melt slowly until it is clear and without lumps. Then pour it off into a jar and let it remain until required. When melting the soap, do not boil it quickly and do not fill the saucepan, even though you mean to have a big wash, as the soap is a very liable to boil away. This will not only waste it but will cause a very unpleasant odor in the house."

"However, can you wash this silk waist so it will look good?" I asked Cook today. "That is very easy," she answered. "I will get ready three bowls of luke warm water and into two of these put some soap jelly. Into the first one I will plunge the waist having the right side upmost, and then squeeze the soapy water gently through the fabric, keeping the waist well under the water and paying special attention to the neck, wristbands and armholes. When it is well washed in the first water, squeeze well.

"Do not wring it but turn onto the wrong side and repeat the process of washing in the second bowl. When well washed, squeeze, shake and rinse in clean warm water to remove the soap; if put at once into cold water the soap might cling to the silk. After rinsing thoroughly in the warm water, rinse in cold running water. To make white silk a good color it should be rinsed in blue water.

Cook Irons my wash silk dresses and waists so beautifully that I asked her how she did them and she told me as follows: "Silk must be ironed quite damp or it will have a rough, unfinished appearance. Use a moderately warm iron and place a piece of muslin between it and the right side of the silk. A hot iron yellows the silk and gives a crimped, rough appearance. "Should the waist get dry before it is ironed, dip it in clean cold water and roll it in a cloth. Do not sprinkle water over it as that would make it look rough and blotchy when ironed. When finished, fold the waist neatly as not to crease it, and put it out to air."

RESOLUTIONS
Whereas: It has been the will of Almighty God to take unto himself our friend and fellow worker, Israel H. Stenhouse;
And whereas: We have lost in him a good and faithful friend who unselfishly shared with us the trials and helped us to bear the disappointments of life;
Be it, therefore, resolved: That we grieve for the fraternal handclasp which is now denied us and mourn for him who has gone a little while before, and
Be it further resolved: That our sympathetic regards go out to his relatives bereaved, and we pray God to extend to her the comfort which He alone can give; and
Be it further resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the family, that they also be spread abroad in the records of this association and printed in the Revere Journal, Revere Budget and Lowell Sun.

REPORTS OF UNREST IN INDIA, MOST POPULOUS DEPENDENCY, WORRY TO GREAT BRITAIN

London denies that there is serious unrest in India, but there have been circumstantial reports of trouble in the great dependency, including reports of the deposition by the people of Hyderabad of their amir or ruler, owing to his staunch support of British rule. It was even said that Earl Kitchener, formerly commander of the troops in India, had gone there to quell the disturbances. It is now known, however, that Kitchener has gone to the Balkans. In the past few weeks some German papers have asserted that British rule in India and also in Egypt is seriously menaced by the Tatar-Bulgarian advance in the Balkans.

SLEEPYTIME TALES

THE WHITE ROOSTER'S ADVENTURE

Once upon a time Charlie and his father started to fix the cold air box to the furnace. His father told him he could help so that made Charlie feel just like a grown up man and he was very proud to carry the heavy nail box and hammer, although they were pretty heavy.

They took out the box and cleaned it out. Then Charlie's father saw that the wire netting that went on the end was rusted away and he told Charlie he might go down to the store and buy a new piece. When he returned it was time for supper and as Charlie's mother was calling for them to come into supper his father saw they would leave the tacking of the netting until morning.

So Charlie planned to get up very early and have the hammer and tacks already for his father and when he awoke his father told him he was delighted to hear his father say: "I guess you are big enough my son to tack the netting on yourself and I will let you try in the morning."

Charlie was soon fast asleep dreaming of hammers and tacks that were flying through the air and all at once the hammer, he dreamed, came bumping down close to his head. He woke with a start, sure enough, just outside his window was a sound like a bumping right under the floor of his room.

Charlie jumped out of bed and ran to wake his father and together they went to see what it was. "It is something in the cold air box," said his father finally, "and I guess you will have to wait until morning to see what it is."

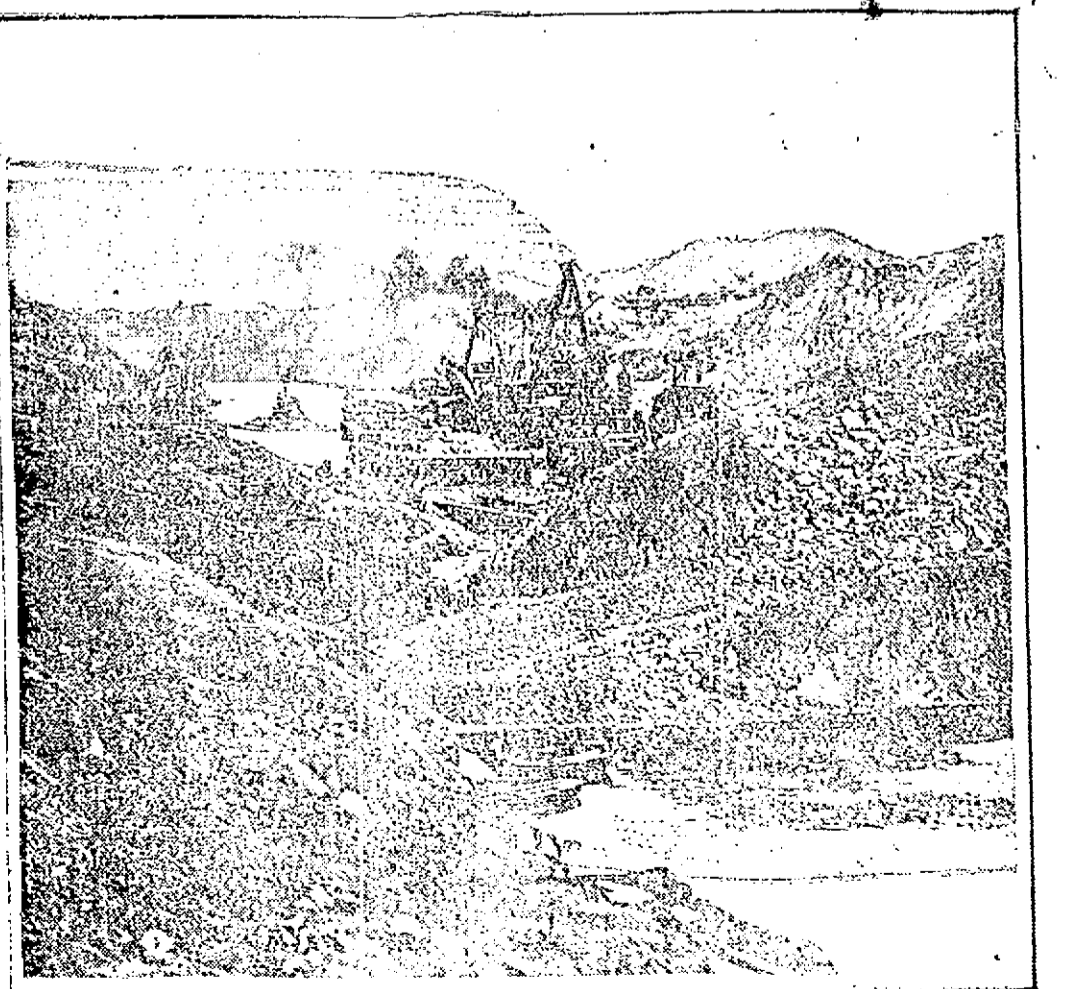

Early next morning Charlie was awake and dressed before anyone else and when his father came down they went out to see what they could find that had made the noise in the night. What do you suppose it was? A big white rooster had run into the open box and ran squawking back to the hen-house, but you may be sure that Charlie tacked the netting on at once, good and strong so the rooster could not get in again.

NEW YEAR WILL COME BEFORE CANAL WILL BE OPEN AGAIN FOR TRAFFIC

PANAMA CANAL CHANNEL BLOCKED BY SLIDE

The picture printed herewith is the latest photograph of the big slide in the Gaillard cut (formerly known as the Culebra cut) of the Panama canal to reach the United States. The letter accompanying the picture said that as there are now upward of 10,000,000 cubic yards of material gradually moving into the canal faster than the dredges can remove it, it is the opinion that the canal channel will not be open for traffic again before Jan. 1.

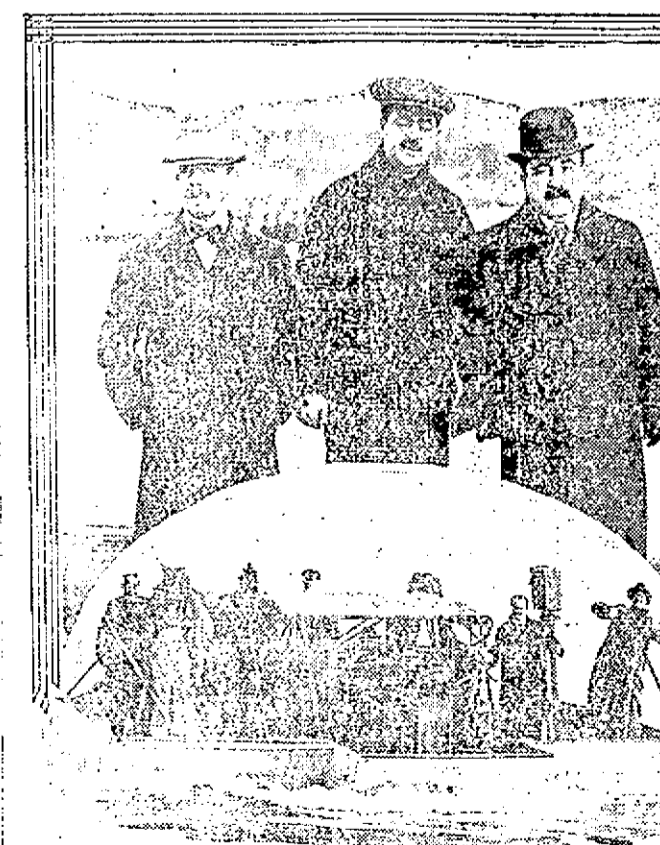

MICHIGAN STARS WHOSE PLAYING HAS HELPED MAKE GRIDIRON HISTORY

COCHRAN MAUBETSCH

These two cracks have played a wonderful season, in their respective positions and are almost sure to be selected by experts for their All-American teams.

FLYING BOAT WITHOUT WINGS MEETS TESTS SUCCESSFULLY

YOLANDA II AND PART OF PARTY AT TEST

A new type of boat, a "glider" a power engine. Two giant aeroplane propellers revolve in the air at a speed of 1,200 revolutions a minute and drive the boat at a speed of forty-five miles an hour. When carrying a capacity load the craft draws only three inches of water. It is adapted for service in all weathers. The Yolanda II is built in six sections and the designer, D. La Mure, of Montreal, Quebec, declares it is unsinkable. It is mounted on cork filled pontoons. The boat is owned by Senor Montoya, a private secretary to Senor Gonzalez Meja, who is a Columbia University graduate. The boat was built at five years ago. The men in the picture are, left to right, Senors Montoya, Meja and Betancourt.

CHURCHILL MAKES HIS PROMISED STATEMENT

Says Dardanelle Campaign Worth Loss of Life—Did Not Arrange Antwerp Expedition

LONDON, Nov. 15, 3.40 p. m.—Winston Spencer Churchill, who resigned last week as chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, said in the house of commons today that the project for sending an army to the relief of Antwerp originated with Field Marshal Kitchener and the French government. Mr. Churchill made this statement in outlining the reasons for his resignation from the cabinet and explaining his administration of the admiralty, of which he formerly was first lord.

Mr. Churchill also declared that if any operations in the history of the world were worth carrying through with sustained fury and utter disregard of life, the operations at the Dardanelles were worth it.

"We are passing through a bad time, which probably will be worse before it is better, but it will be better," Mr. Churchill said. "If we endure, the campaign of 1916 should be decided against Germany by her shortage of men."

Regarding the Dardanelles, Mr. Churchill declared that the admiral on the spot could not be taken with a rush, but that the fortifications might be reduced gradually by bombardment. Admiral Sir John Fisher, then first sea lord, was opposed to a reduction of Great Britain's navy strength in home waters but never criticized the method of attack on the Dardanelles.

Mr. Churchill declared he did not receive clear guidance from Admiral Fisher before the expedition was decided upon or the subsequent firm support to which he was entitled.

In making his promised statement, Mr. Churchill said that he was during his tenure of office as head of the admiralty rather than with his resignation. He said his letter to Premier Asquith gave fully and truthfully the reasons which led him to ask for release from the government. These reasons did not apply to any other member of the cabinet who was not in the war council.

"Moreover, I alone have open to me an alternative form of service to which no exception can be taken and with which I am perfectly content," he continued.

Turning to the naval battle off the Chilean coast last year in which a British squadron was defeated by the Germans, Mr. Churchill said he had been in full agreement with his expert advisers.

The admiralty's dispositions of warships were sound and were the best under the circumstances. Documentary evidence would make this clear without detracting from the gallantry and devotion of Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, who lost his life when the Good Hope went down.

The suggestion that he had overruled his naval advisers and kept the old cruisers in the line, and that the destruction by a German submarine last year was characterized by Mr. Churchill as untrue. He said it was for A. E. Balfour, the present first lord of the admiralty, to determine whether or not the plan should be published. He himself had no desire to press for the publication of papers which might prejudice officers now in the service.

Regarding the Antwerp expedition, Mr. Churchill said it was not arranged by him but had been planned by Field Marshal Kitchener and the French government. He was not concerned with it or consulted until the arrangements were advanced a long way and until the troops were moving or were under orders to move.

REPORT ADRIATIC SUNK DR. G. E. PINKHAM DEAD

UNCONFIRMED RUMOR STATED WHITE STAR LINER SAID TO HAVE BEEN SENT TO BOTTOM

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—There was a report this morning in maritime circles that the steamship Adriatic had been sunk but the report did not state whether the steamship was the big liner ship of the White Star line or was the British steamship Adriatic, which left Kymassi, Greece, on Oct. 11, for Philadelphia and passed Tarifa, Spain, on Oct. 19.

The White Star liner Adriatic arrived in Liverpool, Nov. 11, and was not scheduled to leave for New York until Nov. 24. Last night a report became current on the maritime exchange that it was the Adriatic of the White Star line that was in trouble. The other steamship Adriatic, bound for Philadelphia from Kymassi, should be about in mid-Atlantic today.

Officials of the White Star line said this morning that they had no information regarding the Adriatic other than she had arrived safely last Thursday in Liverpool. They did not credit the report. David Lindsay, assistant to Passenger Manager Jeffries of the White Star line, said that he was positive the Adriatic was still at Liverpool.

"The Adriatic was heavily laden when she left New York," said Mr. Lindsay, "and it would take at least three days to unload her and as many more to load for the return voyage to this port. She was not scheduled to sail for New York until Nov. 24."

The Adriatic was built in 1906 and cost nearly $4,000,000. She has a gross tonnage of 24,541.

WELL-KNOWN PHYSICIAN AND CIVIL WAR VETERAN PASSED AWAY THIS AFTERNOON

The many friends of Dr. George E. Pinkham, one of the best known physicians of this city, will be grieved to learn of his death, which occurred shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon at his home, 263 East Merrimack street, after a lingering illness.

Dr. Pinkham came to this city at the close of the Civil war, having served Uncle Sam in that war as assistant surgeon. He opened an office in this city and practiced medicine with great success until a few years ago, when he retired. The doctor was a prominent Mason and was also a member of the Loyal legion, an organization composed of veterans of the Civil war. His age was 76 years and 7 months. He is survived by his wife.

FAVORS NEW DIPLOMACY

ROOSEVELT AGREES WITH STEPHEN PICHON RELATIVE TO CHANGE AS RESULT OF WAR

PARIS, Nov. 15, 5.30 a. m.—"My views are in entire agreement with yours as to the necessity of a new diplomacy as a result of this terrible war," says Theodore Roosevelt in a letter to Stephen Pichon, former foreign minister, as published today in the Petit Journal. "But that diplomacy must be based on a new system of international governmental action, which in its terms must be built on greater solidarity of international opinion, at least as far as certain kinds of national and international misdeeds are concerned."

Col. Roosevelt is quoted further as saying that a great nation worthy of the name must prepare itself so as to be able to employ its power as an instrument of supreme justice, and that he is attempting to induce the United States to put into action its intellectual and moral principles.

FAY TELLS OF DYNAMITE PLOT

Gives Statement to U. S. Attorney Marshall—Confesses Plans to Blow Up Ships and Gives Further Details of Plot to Destroy or Damage Munitions Shipped From This Country to Allies

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Robert Fay, one of the six men now under indictment charged with attempting to place bombs on munitions ships sailing from this port for England and France, today made a long statement to United States Attorney H. Snowden Marshall. The statement is said to be in the nature of a confession and also to furnish new details upon the alleged German plot to destroy or damage munitions shipped from this country to the allies.

A prominent official connected with the investigation said a quasi-agreement had been made between the government authorities and Fay, and that Fay, who claimed to be a lieutenant in the German army, would plead guilty when brought to trial with the five others on conspiracy charges. It was also stated that Fay would appear before the federal grand jury, but not until after his latest statement has been checked up by department of justice and secret service agents. If Fay goes before the federal grand jury it is considered certain that he will not be asked to waive immunity.

After Fay's statement had been taken down by a stenographer it was said by officials that a considerable portion of the statement Fay made shortly after his arrest several weeks ago was valueless, chiefly because of white experimenting with explosives, according to secret service agents, confessed at that time that he came to this country through the aid of German secret service with the avowed purpose of attaching a "magnetic bomb" of his own invention to munitions vessels sailing from this port.

FRENCH TRENCH TAKEN NEW HAVEN TRIAL

Venezelos May Not Take Part in Greek Election—8500 Serbs Captured—Other War News

On the front in northern France the Germans announce the capture of a projecting French trench 300 yards long northeast of Bourle, the new position being connected with the German line at that point.

In fighting in this region yesterday, Paris announced last night, the Germans penetrated a first line trench but were immediately driven out. Today's French official report mentions continued fighting here but no further shift in positions, even of a temporary nature. The Germans suffered very heavy losses in their attack of yesterday, the French statement declares.

NOT ALLOWED TO SPEAK

COPENHAGEN AUDIENCES REFUSED TO PERMIT ERLING BJORNSTON TO GIVE WAR LECTURE

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 14, via London, Nov. 15.—Nearly 3000 persons who had gathered tonight at a hall where Erling Bjornston, son of the Norwegian dramatist, was to deliver a lecture upon the impressions of the war he had gained from visits to three fronts, refused to permit the speaker to go on with his address.

Members of the German legation staff occupied prominent seats in the hall, but most of the audience was composed of Copenhagen residents, including a large number of students. When Bjornston rose to speak the audience sang and shouted, declaring its willingness to listen to a German speaker but not to a person from a neutral country.

After striving vainly for an hour to restore order, the chairman declared the meeting closed without Bjornston having spoken. A large force of police was present but the disturbance was not of a nature to require their intervention.

DOING GREAT BUSINESS

New York Hotels Enjoying Era of Almost Unprecedented Prosperity

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—New York hotels are enjoying an era of almost unprecedented prosperity. Many of them are unable to accommodate the increasing number of guests. This is attributed in part to the arrival of many purchasing agents and their extensive suites, sent here by England, France and Italy.

Agents from stores in South America, Central America, the West Indies and Canada who formerly went to London, Paris or Berlin, are here to do their buying for the first time. Buyers and visitors from the west are arriving at the rate of 2000 a week at a time when the hotels usually are crowded with visitors from the smaller eastern cities and near-by country districts.

ZEPPELIN DESTROYED

LONDON, Nov. 15, 10.35 a. m.—The General News correspondent at The Hague says information has been received from Frankfurt that a Zeppelin landed near Grodno, Russia, after being badly damaged by Russian artillery. The message says the dirigible was destroyed in great part by fire after the crew was rescued.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The trial of the eleven former directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad on the charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust law, which has been marked by the complexity of the transactions placed before the jury by the government, reached a climax in the particular today. Judge Hunt announced his inability to understand the nature of certain of the transactions and called upon counsel to explain them orally, to submit a written statement of their history.

The transaction had to do with the Metropolitan Steamship line whereby the government alleged that the New Haven acquired control of that company's four freight boats and had its two passenger boats transferred to the Pacific coast. These four vessels turned up eventually in the possession of the Eastern Steamship corporation in which the New Haven had a stock interest.

The government's testimony involved the Metropolitan Steamship Co. of Maine, No. 1, the Metropolitan Steamship Co. of Maine No. 2, the Metropolitan Steamship Co. of New Jersey, the Pacific Navigation Co., the New England Securities Co., the Eastern Steamship Co. and the Eastern Steamship corporation and threatened to bring more in to the list when Judge Hunt called a halt with his request for an explanation.

"The magnitude of this case is tremendous," he remarked. "Its intricacies seem to multiply."

Charles S. Mellen, who was on the stand, admitted that he was "twisted" and counsel for the defense accused the government of "befogging the case."

The government dropped the subject temporarily but precipitated another tangle when it began to delve into financial transactions between the Hartford & New York Transportation Co., the New England Navigation Co., the Eastern Steamship corporation, Judge Hunt called another halt with a query as to the object of the testimony. Upon Attorney Bates' explanation that it led up to evidence of the offering of rebates the court ruled it out on the ground that it was "merely cumulative."

"We must curtail this case," he warned.

SERIES OF LESSONS ON NATURALIZATION

Work to Be Connected With Educational System of the City—Schedule of Lessons and Dates

The work of assisting in the preparation for naturalization which was begun during the early part of the present year is to be continued, but along more definite lines for the coming season.

Instead of providing lectures and talks on the topics which have a bearing on preparation for naturalization, it is the plan to give a course of regular lessons.

With a desire to connect the work as far as possible with the educational system of the city, the lessons are to be prepared and given by the masters of the city schools. The only persons other than the masters who are to prepare lessons are Hon. John Jacob Rogers, M. C., and Hon. Dennis J. Murphy. The lessons will be given in the hall of the Green school, in Merrimack street, opposite the city library, beginning on Thursday evening, Dec. 2, 1915 and ending on Thursday evening, May 25, 1916. The entire course will cover 25 evenings; each lesson will be given and then reviewed at the following session of the school.

The schedule has been planned by Supl. Hugh J. Molloy.

Schedule of Lessons
History of United States, Mr. Blaby; Government of United States, Mr. Molloy; Law-making for the nation, Mr. Harris; the constitution, Hon. John Jacob Rogers; history of Massachusetts, Mr. Green; state government, Mr. Barry, law-making for the state, Mr. Whitcomb; constitution of Massachusetts, Mr. Mellen; county, town and city, Mr. Perkins; primary elections, Mr. Callahan; elections, state, county and municipal, Mr. King; duties and privileges of citizenship, Mr. Irish; becoming a citizen, Hon. ## VERY HARD DRAG

City of Lowell Must Send State Check for Big Amount

The city of Lowell has an account with the state that is balanced each year at about this time and it is not what might be termed a consistent account for sometimes the balance is in favor of the city and quite often in favor of the state. It is an honest account inasmuch as it doesn't play favorites.

The balance sheet for the last year was received at the city treasurer's office today and it shows a balance of $94,165.91 in the state's favor. If the balance were the other way the balance sheet would have been accompanied by a check from the state. But there was no such luck and just for that the city will have to send the state a check that would represent quite a comfortable individual fortune.

The state's account against the city is as follows: State tax, $100,239.00; resident bank tax, $10,838.14; addition of grade crossings, $7,874.73; state highway tax, $752.25; auditing municipal accounts, $1,723.57; penalty for failure to make returns, $200. Total $211,406.70.

The city's account against the state runs as follows: Corporation tax, public service, $16,171.03; corporation tax, business, $67,129.01; national bank tax, $2,573.14; military aid, $1,311.50; state aid, $13,906.50; soldiers' relief, $1,100; charity department, $140; aiding mothers under dependent children's act, $1,067.50; state railway, $10,826.03; health department, contagious diseases, $30.55; making a total of $117,241.75, and a balance in favor of the state of $94,165.91.

SCHOOL FUNDS LOW

EVENING SCHOOLS MAY BE CLOSED, SAYS DR. LAMBERT, FOR LACK OF MONEY

It was reported at city hall today that unless the municipal council provides more money for the school department it will be necessary to close the evening schools. The school department is apparently getting down pretty low and something will have to be done within the very near future if the evening schools are to be continued.

Dr. John H. Lambert, chairman of the school board, admits that the school department is almost at the end of its resources and that the proposition to close the evening schools has not yet been discussed.

"I talked with Commissioner Duncan, informally," said Dr. Lambert, "but we did not discuss the closing of the evening schools. Mr. Duncan and other members of the council, I presume, are acquainted with the status of the school department's finances at the present time, and there is no getting away from the fact that we are very short. I hope, however, that it will not be necessary to close the evening schools. There is a margin last year and we may be able to get by this year, but it looks as though we would need assistance."

Commissioner Duncan stated this afternoon that he is waiting to hear from the school board. As the result of my conversation with Dr. Lambert, said Mr. Duncan, "I asked the school board for a statement setting forth the school department's exact financial condition. I am still waiting for the communication. We cannot borrow any money for the schools for that matter, so contrary to law, and no provided. If we render the department any assistance it will have to be by way of transfers."

CROSS STREET FIRE

Box 16 which sounded shortly before 5 o'clock this afternoon was for a slight fire in the building at 162-164 Cross street, which was damaged earlier in the afternoon. A smoldering embers were promptly extinguished.

SUPERIOR COURT CASE

SUIT BY CATHERINE F. SULLIVAN VS. BOSTON ELEVATED RAILWAY CO. FOR $10,000

The case of Catherine F. Sullivan vs. Boston Elevated Railway company was called in the civil session of superior court at 10 o'clock this morning. The plaintiff brought suit for personal injuries alleged to have been received in a collision of cars in the Harvard subway, Cambridge, on Nov. 30, 1912. The ad damnum is set at $10,000. Michael J. Sullivan, father of the plaintiff, also brings suit for $2,000 for medical attendance and personal services to his daughter who was at the time of the accident a minor. Bartlett and Bartlett for the plaintiff and R. F. Drew for the company.

GREECE MAY DISARM ALLIES

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Diplomatic representatives at Athens are greatly alarmed at hints that the Franco-British troops in Serbia attempt to fall back toward Saloniki. The Greek authorities may seek to disarm them. Intimations of this nature have come from the premier and minister of finance and the assurances from Greek official sources of warm friendship and benevolent neutrality do not carry complete conviction.

ALLEGED THIEF OF TIME

Leo Gauvreau, aged about 19 years, was arrested this afternoon by Inspector Walsh and booked at headquarters on a charge of stealing two watches from P. Souza & Co., of 99 Gorham street. It is claimed the lad took the watches out of a show case while pretending to be making a purchase in the Souza store.

RAILROAD SOLD AT AUCTION

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 15.—The New Orleans, Texas & Mexico railroad a subsidiary of the St. Louis & San Francisco system, was sold at public auction here today by order of Judge Rufus Foster of the federal district court, to Walter L. Taylor, representing the bond holders, for $5,000,000.

FIND KIDNAPPED WIFE AT ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH

Husband Kept Her Prisoner All Night in Cabin—Choked Her and Threatened Life

Meeting of Catholic Federation—Addresses by Rev. Fr. Mullin, Drs. McCluskey and Tighe

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 15.—A posse of officers and special officers are surrounding the woods between Atkinson, N. H., and Haverhill, Mass., searching for Henry Hobbs of Haverhill, who is wanted on a charge of abducting his wife, Mrs. Millie Damon Hobbs, of this city.

Saturday evening Hobbs, accompanied by his brother and another man, dressed to impersonate an officer, called at the home of Almon H. Jenness on South street, where Mrs. Hobbs has been living, and told her that her counsel, Judge Gupitell, wanted to consult with her.

Threatened to Kill Her

Judge Gupitell has a divorce case for Mrs. Hobbs against her husband, they having been separated for some months. Mrs. Hobbs entered an auto they had, supposing that they were going to Judge Gupitell's office. When the machine started she became aware that one of the men in the car was her husband and the third his brother.

The car stopped at a fast rate of speed during the time Mrs. Hobbs was alternately threatened her life and attempted to make love to her. About 10 o'clock Mrs. Hobbs thinks the car stopped in front of her husband's house at Atkinson, near the state line.

Passed Night of Terror

When found yesterday morning she was alone and was suffering from a night of terror, her husband having choked her and threatened her life unless she signed over to him some property she held.

She was found in a lower room of the house. She informed the officers that her husband had locked her in a room after his brother and the other man had departed for Haverhill, and that he had made an attempt to force her to sign a release of the property, choked her and she thought that she was going to die.

After hours of this treatment he locked her in the room, going up stairs to bed and telling her that the windows were all boarded up to prevent her escape. Hobbs was armed with a revolver and a .45-calibre rifle, and she was afraid to move until she heard the voices of Judge Gupitell and a deputy sheriff.

Meantime Haverhill officers had arrested Hobbs' brother, who had driven the car. The police say that he admitted driving the car, but that he did not know who impersonated the officer.

Warrants For Party

Yesterday morning Sheriff Ceylon Spinyer of Rockingham county went to Atkinson with warrants for the arrest of all of the men implicated in the affair, and Hobbs' brother will be brought back here.

Up to 9 o'clock last night there had been no signs of Hobbs giving himself up.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs were married at Kittery, Me., two and a half years ago, but lived together only a year. She is well known in this vicinity, where she was a school teacher, and is of excellent character. Hobbs has served time in prison, but was thought to have reformed, and was working on the Atlantic Shore railroad as a conductor at the time of his marriage.

PENCHANT FOR PLAYING COWBOY

HAVERHILL, Nov. 14.—Henry Hobbs, who is now being hunted in the woods between this city and Atkinson, N. H., is 38 years of age, and has recently been employed as a mechanic and chauffeur in Boston. Early in the summer he worked here.

He has always been much interested in Wild West affairs, and when he purchased a large tract of land in Atkinson he christened it the "Providence Hill" ranch. It was to this place that he had his wife taken.

It was his custom, when he lived at the ranch, to ride into Haverhill frequently on horseback, wearing a complete cowboy outfit from sombrero to chaps. He told small boys that he would teach them to become cowboys at his ranch, but he never had any stock there. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hobbs.

He Was Sent to the State Prison

Some years ago for a hold-up in which he stopped a team at the point of a gun.

W. Scott Peters, former district attorney, is defending his brother, Charles Hobbs, who drove the automobile in which Mrs. Hobbs was taken to Atkinson. It is not expected that Charles Hobbs will resist being taken to Portsmouth for trial on the charge of abduction against him.

CATHOLIC CHURCH NEWS

NOTES OF THE SERVICES YESTERDAY IN THE VARIOUS CHURCHES

St. Patrick's

The 7 o'clock mass at St. Patrick's church yesterday was celebrated by Monsignor O'Brien, P.R., who was assisted in giving communion by Rev. Timothy P. Callahan. Members of the Immaculate Conception sodality received communion in a body. Rev. Joseph A. Curran celebrated high mass and the sermon was preached by Rev. Timothy Callahan. At all of the masses the people were taken on behalf of the clergy for the success of the recent reunion.

St. Peter's

High mass at St. Peter's church yesterday was celebrated by Rev. John H. Sharkey, O.M.I. of the Tewksbury novitiate, and the sermon was preached by Rev. D. J. Heffernan. Members of the Married Ladies' sodality received communion at the 7.30 o'clock mass which was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. D. J. Keleher, Ph.D., who also delivered a short sermon.

The Holy Name society held a business meeting last evening at 6.30. A talk on "Columbus" was given by Dr. Keleher, this being the first of a series to be given the coming season.

Next Friday a concert and social will be held at Lincoln hall under the auspices of the Holy Name society.

Immaculate Conception

Members of the Immaculate Conception sodality and the Holy Name society received communion yesterday morning at the 7.30 o'clock mass which was celebrated by Rev. James McCarthy, O.M.I. Rev. Owen P. McGuire, O.M.I., assisted in giving communion. The high mass was celebrated by Rev. John M. O'Brien, O.M.I., and the sermon was preached by Rev. Fr. McCartin. At all of the masses a letter from His Eminence Cardinal O'Connell was read, urging support for the Catholic organ of the archdiocese.

Sacred Heart

High mass at the Sacred Heart church yesterday was celebrated by Rev. Albert Dermott, O.M.I. of the Tewksbury novitiate, and the sermon was preached by Rev. James Quinn, O.M.I. of San Antonio, Texas. The Boys' sodality received communion at the 8.30 mass celebrated by Rev. Bernard Fletcher, O.M.I. The pastor, Rev. Fr. Wade Smith, O.M.I., gave communion. Frs. Flynn and McCormack are preaching a mission at Charlestown, and Rev. Fr. Wood is conducting a mission at Binghamton, N. Y.

Fr. Quinn is vice provincial of the Oblate order, superior of the Oblate house and pastor of St. Mary's church in San Antonio, Texas. His text yesterday was "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's." During the course of his eloquent sermon he said: "The church recognizes the sovereignty of the state and that all authority comes from God. The church binds her children in conscience to fealty to the state whether it is a monarchy or a republic. Obedience to the law is liberty. The civil law preaches simply external acts. The law of the church controls the consciences of her children by principle, and that principle is obedience to the law."

St. Columba's

Rev. John A. Degan, pastor, celebrated the 7 o'clock mass yesterday at St. Columba's church and the parish mass was celebrated by Rev. Thomas W. Buckley, who also preached on the gospel of the day. It was announced that the Tabernacle society will conduct a musicale and what in the parish hall on Wednesday evening.

Miss Minnie Beasley, of Westville, Okla., who has been doing housework to secure funds to pay her way through school, has fallen heir to $30,000.

Under the auspices of the Northern Middlesex County Federation of Catholic societies, the first of a series of meetings was held last evening in St. Michael's church, this city, and attended by a large audience.

The purpose of the meeting was to explain and encourage the movement of federation to which Cardinal O'Connell has given special attention, and incidentally to place the Catholic viewpoint before the Massachusetts public. It is essentially a laymen's movement, and last evening the main feature was the delivery of addresses on Catholic subjects by two prominent members of the parish, Dr. M. A. Tighe and Dr. Richard J. McCluskey. Rev. John J. Shaw made the opening address, and Rev. Francis J. Mullin spoke on the influence of religion in education in this state.

Before the meeting proper Miss Ella Rellly played a medley of national airs on the organ and at intervals the children's choir sang patriotic songs and hymns, including "Land of the Free," "America," and Cardinal O'Connell's "Hymn to the Holy Name." At the conclusion of the meeting a rising vote of thanks was proposed by Charles E. McCarthy, president of the Holy Name society.

Rev. Fr. Shaw

Rev. John J. Shaw, pastor of St. Michael's parish, was the presiding officer of the evening. In welcoming the speakers of the evening, he gave a brief outline of the purpose of the Federation of Catholic societies. He referred to the great progress of this movement here in the archdiocese of Boston under the guidance of Cardinal O'Connell. He said federation demands no special favors for Catholics. It claims only what is just and fair. It endeavors to create sound public opinion on problems of the day and to proclaim their Catholic solution. It stands for the Christian life of the nation; for the sanctity and indismissibility of marriage and the sanctity of the home. It maintains the necessity of Christian principles in public and private life. It battles against errors opposed to Christianity, especially those that attack the foundations of society. It will co-operate with all loyal citizens in the cultivation of virtue and truth and in the uprooting of falsehood and injustice wherever found.

Rev. Fr. Mullin's Address

Speaking on "Religion in Education in Massachusetts," Rev. Francis J. Mullin gave a historical outline of the part religion has played in the educational question in this state, including the radical change from the denominational schools to the present non-sectarian school. In the historical outline the speaker exposed the continuity of motive behind the proposed sectarian amendment to the constitution of Massachusetts of today and the amendment of 1853.

Speaking of the part the Catholic church has taken in this matter, he said: "It has been said and truly that the greatest religious fact in the U. S. today is the Catholic school system maintained by private individuals. The Catholic parish schools now number 5493, with 1,429,859 pupils attending. More than 20,000 Catholic men and women unselfishly devote their lives to the work of teaching in these schools. But let it not be forgotten that all this is the concrete expression of a principle that the welfare of the state, the stability of the union, the continuance of civil and religious freedom, the moral well-being of society, and the lasting happiness of the individual depend upon the code and standards of moral discipline, self-restraint and temperance taught by religion. Moreover, that the conviction of this principle may be grounded into the Catholic citizenship of this country, Catholics who give their millions annually to the support of the public school, at the same time impose on themselves the heavy burden of the Catholic school system. Think what this means. Catholics are paying yearly in a self-imposed tax $11,438,572, a figure that would be much higher were it not for the self-sacrifice of those who devote their lives to the work. But this is not the whole story. If the Catholic parochial school children had to be educated by the national taxpayers, the figures of the federal commissioner of education tell us it would mean over $22,000,000 annually for running expenses and to house them in schools would mean an outlay of over $53,000,000.

Were the parochial schools to close, the taxpayers of this nation would have to assume a new school burden of over $100,000,000 for the coming year. This, together with his public school tax, from which he takes no return, plus the self-imposed tax to run the parochial schools is the Catholic citizen's gift to the nation. And while doing all this to instill in the life of the nation the very principles which alone can preserve a free government like ours, the Catholic and his schools receive the jibe of "un-American."

Dr. R. J. McCluskey

Dr. McCluskey's subject was the "Nation's Debt to the Church." He spoke in part as follows:

In the church there are some few perhaps who do not appreciate the gift of faith which is given them so freely. In pagan times, men, young and old, even delicate women, and noble maidens suffered torments unspeakable that Christianity might be established and preserved. In these later days, however, we think little of what it cost our ancestors to preserve the faith intact, to carry it intact to distant lands, to plant it even in this western world. On the other hand many who do not accept her dogmas, respect and admire the ancient church, in whose principles and practices they see a conservative force, a safe moral teacher of millions of souls. There are many too, indifferent to every form of religion, who are generous enough to allow their neighbors the same freedom of conscience they themselves enjoy. These broad-minded non-Catholics with the enlightened Catholics will use in federation an educative and uplifting force, teaching men their duties to themselves and their fellow men. They will stand for the principles that stand for justice to all, irrespective of creed and race. They will not and others need not fear that Catholics will ever ask for anything detrimental to the nation which their ancestors in the faith helped to create and preserve by their genius, their toil and their blood.

Surely the Catholic has every reason to feel at home in this land and to be loyal to its best interests.

To Catholic influence it owes its very existence. A Catholic sailor discovered the Catholic were the first European people to explore its great lakes, to navigate its mighty rivers, to climb its lofty mountains. In the south the soil of Florida and California is drenched with the blood of heroic missionaries who gave their lives to establish Christianity in America. In the north adventurous men blazed the way and with them came holy ambassadors who preached the gospel of Christ to the red men. Of one of these most famous pioneers, a Protestant historian says: "While New Englanders covered solitude, and the settlers of Virginia, hardly ventured beyond the sound of the cannon, Chaplain was planting on shore and islands the emblem of his faith." A well known Protestant orator of Chicago paid a glowing tribute to the missionaries of Marquette's time and said: "I am proud to think that the first civilized life on the site of that great city."

All over the United States, cities, lakes, rivers and mountain peaks, by their very names proclaim their Catholic origin. The names of such Catholic heroes, as Fr. Healy, Fr. LaSalle, Fr. De Soto, Father Garnier, Jacques Becheuf, Lallemand, are familiar to every student of United States history.

While England's claims in America were based on the discoveries made by the Catholic Cabots, and many English settlers came to America against religious persecution at home, Catholic Maryland alone can claim the honor of establishing religious liberty. A Protestant historian has said: "New England Protestantism appealed to liberty and then closed the doors against her." To quote again: "From France, Holland, Germany, Sweden, Finland and Piedmont, the children of misfortune found protection under the sceptre of the Roman Catholic."

When the question of independence was broached Catholics were its strongest adherents. Catholic loyalty to the United States received its baptism when Patrick Carr fell in the Boston massacre. Since then Catholics have never missed a battle. From Barry, the father of our navy, to Hagerity at Vera Cruz, the list of Catholics in a long one. In the revolution, such names as Morison, Bland, and Dr. Estlin Lafayette will forever be linked with the name of Washington, while the aid given by Catholic France and Catholic Spain will never be forgotten.

The later struggles of our country brought such heroes as Shiel, Mulligan, Ewing, Hunt, Sanders, Stone, McMahon and Meagher. Never from a Catholic loyal to his faith has an injury come to the flag.

Our church saw the birth of this nation and our ancestors in the faith gave us the firmest of foundations. Our worship was the first to lay the foundation for the civilization which we enjoy today. A century before Harvard and the thought of Catholic colleges founded the first colleges in the new world and two years before the immigration of John Harvard, the Jesuits at Quebec had a flourishing college.

Who then will call us foreigners or question our loyalty? If any such were in our midst, let them turn to friendship and the Catholic spirit of tolerance, teach him the story that will reveal to him "splendid scenes of history, bloody scenes of martyrdom, tranquil scenes of peace, in which the actors were of the faith which is the heart of our nation, the core of our hearts and which in time of trouble and danger was a beacon light to the holy and heroic men who discovered and helped to preserve America."

Dr. M. A. Tighe

Dr. Tighe spoke on "Civilization and the Church," and his address showed deep research and scholarly investigation. He referred to the influence of the church on society, illustrating his remarks by historical references to medieval times, particularly to the 10th, 11th and 12th centuries.

NASHUA STRIKE FOR STUDY OF BIBLE

Strikers Reject Mill Agents' Offer—Refuse to Return to Work

NASHUA, N. H., Nov. 15.—At a meeting of the textile strikers in Hamilton hall yesterday afternoon they rejected the proposition presented Saturday night by State Labor Commissioner John S. B. Davis over the signatures of the mill agents, that the strikers return to work, except the law-breakers, and that the agents make individual adjustment of conditions and wages which can be shown to be inequitable when compared with other textile centers.

The strikers hold that the only plan which they will approve is that submitted by Commissioner Davis last week, which the agents rejected, specifying that after the employees go back differences be settled by the state board of arbitration.

Before the vote was taken a conference was held at which Organizer Thomas F. McMahon of the United Textile workers and the strike committee were present with Commissioner Davis, who further explained the proposition. Organizer McMahon presided at the meeting which was addressed by Kurver Bostonick, who is making a nation-wide appeal for aid for the strikers.

Before leaving for home, Commissioner Davis said he had gone as far in the matter as he can at this time and is now awaiting the affidavits of the agents, stating their reason for refusing arbitration. He added that he came to Nashua Saturday with the plan which the strikers rejected yesterday at the request of Gov. Roland H. Spaulding.

The mill agents went to Concord Saturday on a suggestion coming through Major Frank Knox of Manchester.

A considerable number of operatives left on lastbound cars last night to take jobs in other cities.

Rev. Frank G. Alger Gives Up Pawtucket Church Pastorate

Rev. Frank G. Alger, pastor of the Pawtucket Congregational church for the past eight years, has tendered his resignation to take effect after the first Sunday in January. His letter of resignation was read at the close of the service Sunday morning, by Rev. Allan C. Ferrin who had exchanged pulpits with Mr. Alger. The letter of resignation was as follows:

Lowell, Mass., Nov. 13, 1915.

To the Members of the Pawtucket Congregational Church and Parish.

Dear Friends—Eight years ago I came to you as your minister. It seems wise to me to lay aside now, for a year, the duties and responsibilities of the pastorate. Therefore I offer to you my resignation as pastor of the Pawtucket church, and name as my concluding Sunday with you, earnest communion, the first Sunday in January.

I take this opportunity of expressing my gratitude for our united life, fellowship that means friendship. I thank you, my friends, for your co-operation with me in the work of these years, for the consideration with which you have borne with my mistakes, and for the many appreciative words you have given me. Far beyond my deserving, of my pulpit work.

It is a source of gratification that another man will take over under such favorable conditions. Our Sunday morning service has never had a better attendance than during the past year. The Sunday school has the largest recorded enrollment in its history, and the present deepening of the spiritual life, and increased earnestness of the world of the Christian Endeavor society give me very great joy.

A pastor whose thought is constantly for his people, must necessarily feel a strong attachment for those with whom he has lived and worked, whose joys and sorrows he has been permitted to share and for those whom he has had the sacred privilege of receiving into the membership of the church. In this imperfect separation I would not omit to privilege it has been to give the gospel message not only to the families of this parish, but also to the large body of boys and girls from the Ayer Home. God bless each one of them. To break from all such deeply rooted relationships is one of the hardest experiences of the life of the pastor. And yet this course compels itself to my most prayerful and deliberate judgment. I ask you, therefore, to take action upon my resignation and join with me in calling an ecclesiastical council for my dismission.

It is my wish that we may make these closing weeks the best we shall have spent together; the best in service for Christ and the church, the best in the quality of the service, and the best in our fellowship one with another.

Wishing for the church a life of prayer and activities with ever those closing weeks the best we shall have spent together; the best in service for Christ and the church, the best in the quality of the service, and the best in our fellowship one with another.

I am sincerely yours in Christ, Frank G. Alger.

The Pawtucket church has made steady progress during Mr. Alger's time as pastor and the announcement yesterday was cause for genuine regret.

SOCIAL AND FRATERNAL

An important meeting of Division I, A. O. H., was held yesterday afternoon in Hibernian hall. Chairman Henry Smith of the smoke talk committee reported all arrangements were completed for the social to take place Thursday evening. An invitation from the board of trade to attend the industrial exhibition on "Fraternal night" was accepted. Financial Secretary Sheehan's report of the financial resources of the division for the past six months showed the treasury to be in a prosperous condition. Three applications for membership were accepted upon and one new member was admitted.

Evening Star Rebekah Lodge

At the meeting of Evening Star Rebekah lodge, 22 I. O. O. F., held Saturday evening, arrangements were made for the celebration of the 39th anniversary of the lodge, which will be held Saturday evening, Nov. 27. The following committee is in charge: Maude E. Green, Lillian M. Jacobs, Lena E. Sawyer, Georgia M. Queen, Etta J. Thompson, Katie M. Vinal, Etta G. Spaulding, Elvia B. Andrews, Florence E. Rowell, Irene A. Collins, Mary R. Davis, Elizabeth A. Kershaw, Chas. C. Thompson. The entertainment will be in charge of Mrs. Florence M. Weinbeck.

The district deputy president, Mrs. Annie E. Crouse of Lawrence, and her suite are to be the guests of the evening.

After the business meeting a bean-bag contest was enjoyed under the efficient management of Wilford G. Boyce. The two teams were captained by Charles C. Thompson and Mark H. Sawyer. Sawyer's team won by a score of 220 to 175. Capt. Sawyer also received the prize for the highest individual score, while Mrs. Ida B. Duchanau was a close second. Mrs. Elvira E. Andrews won the third prize and Mrs. Etta J. Thompson received the much-needed consolation prize.

CONDEMN CONSCRIPTION

CO. G. IRISH VOLUNTEERS. ADOPTS STRONG RESOLUTIONS AT MEETING IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—A vigorous condemnation of proposed British conscription in Ireland was voted by Military company G. Irish Volunteers of Division I, A. O. H., at their meeting in Deane hall, 1651 Washington street, last night.

The resolutions of protest also included a resolve to support "non-military" and "physically" the National Irish Volunteers. The meeting was attended by more than 50 members of the company, which acted as the military escort for Cardinal O'Connell on the occasion of his return from Rome some years ago.

There are about 400 members in the company, many of them are veterans, and they are to a man, so speakers at the meeting said, behind the resolutions. Captain A. B. Roberts, the presiding officer, read the resolves, which were passed unanimously.

CITY PLANNING LIVES

City planning is not dead nor is it sleeping even though, as known in this city, it is a term vague and generally misunderstood. Not so long ago, indeed, with a blare of trumpets, as it were, a city planning board was organized, but its members soon discovered the futility of making plans which never went beyond the planning stage. The board had no money to put its plans into practice and it had no authority to compel others to do so and so the planning board has sunk into silence and inactivity. We still have the board but, through no fault of its own, it is mighty short in achievement, and it is too sensible to waste energy in fruitless talking and suggesting.

Yet city planning lives and in other communities it does not sleep. Even in Lowell, its principles are getting wider recognition, for the industrial exposition that started this morning is a splendid indication of its possibilities. Some optimistic citizens may refer to the Dummer street extension as a further illustration of its advantages, but wise city planning stipulates at the outset that a city should not attempt what it cannot afford, and that the more important things must come first.

In the neighboring city of Boston, which, logically, ought to set the pace for all cities of Massachusetts—an exhibition of city planning has been opened with the object of agitating the movement and giving it a new impetus. One of the side issues is a conference between leading men in public and private affairs who have ideas as to what cities must do to progress. This has drawn forth some splendid sentiments, study of which would benefit all cities where there is a need for city planning—and where is the perfect city?

A few of the ideas gathered at random from the addresses of the delegates to the conference will prove of interest. Ralph Adams Cram, the noted architect, who, by the way, is a member of the Boston city planning board, declared at the outset: "The planning board should first make the city wholesome, sanitary and homelike—then it can resort to the beautification. The planning board's real object is, not bigger cities, but better cities." What city would not be benefited by such a practical ideal?

Governor Walsh spoke in a like vein, emphasizing the practical side of city planning and discounting its esthetic aims. "The scheme is wholly utilitarian," he said, "and is not, except in a very remote degree, concerned with the mere esthetic features of city and town life." Mayor Curley voiced something which is very applicable to local conditions when he said: "The chief benefit of a planning board is that it changes the perspective of the public in the matter of civic improvements. The average city or town official is too busy with his own duties properly to look into the future and the planning board blazes the trail for future and proper development." The mayor also said that he hopes to see the adoption of some plan to provide money for carrying out the suggestions of the planning board. Other things discussed and illustrated in some phase were: public conveniences, recreation, education, encouragement of industries, municipal finance, abolition of slums, fire prevention, etc.

The weakness of the city planning ideal is that its field is too large and its authority too small. The ideal is splendid, but it is hard to conceive of its working satisfactorily in the average city. Its only constructive policy seems to be the forming of public opinion, but public opinion cannot work miracles when the public is so careless concerning municipal administration and the type of men elected to office. Unfortunately there is slight reason to suppose that city planning boards anywhere in New England are more successful than here. They are squarely up against selfish political control and public indifference. Haste the day when they are city planning boards in fact as in name.

MORE FREIGHT CARS

What is the best barometer of general business? One says bank clearings; another market reports, and so on. There are many reliable tests of general conditions and when they point to prosperity all the wallings in the world cannot bring depression; when, on the other hand, they point to bad business, all of the world's boostings in the world cannot bring prosperity. The country notes with gratification that on all sides there are present indications of solid and increasing prosperity.

Not the least of these business barometers is the reported shortage of freight cars—a shortage that has become acute. Last April the railroads estimated that over three hundred thousand cars were lying idle on the tracks. On Nov. 1 there were only 25,000 and the supply is fast becoming exhausted because of the heavy cross which are now being moved. A large reserve is generally kept for the coal traffic, and this year it will be found insufficient. Consequently the railroads are putting in orders for increased equipment.

This naturally leads to an increase in the output of steel products which depend almost wholly in normal times on the state of general business. The United States steel corporation is unable to turn out all its orders, and it has, therefore, decided to enlarge several of its plants. About $10,000,000 will be so spent, and the construction will be rushed along so that the steel concerns will be able to meet their domestic and foreign orders. The story of steel is the story of all large industries in this country, though perhaps not to such a proportionate extent.

Some of the largest mills in New England are now reporting the largest business of this season for many years and everywhere the tone is one of courage and cheery optimism. The dye situation seems to be on the way to adjustment and there is little disposition among directors of big business to fear the war, whether it is to be long or short. He who is not on the prosperity band wagon will be very lonely in a little while.

WEARING OUT

There is much to support the oft-mentioned theory that the allies are permitting the Germans to take most of the offensive in the war, realizing that it is a wearing out process and that the more the Germans exercise now the sooner will they be without resources. To date, Germany has shown an energy and ability which has had no precedent in history, but as compared with the allies it is at a tremendous disadvantage. It is far more limited in men, munitions, food and all the supplies that are necessary to the life of a nation. This is with the allies, and with the extension of the field of combat, Germany is forced to throw more and more of her resources into the actual conflict. There is enormous deterioration in the various fronts and this must be constantly offset or Germany will be forced to give up her offensive and fight a losing battle. The allies feel that they can afford to wait while Germany must strike swiftly and strongly in order to change the fortunes of war.

On the other hand, Germany is hoping that the financial support of the allies will fail, for they too are using up their enormous resources at an increasing rate. Neither side could keep up the fight indefinitely, and all of the nations are beginning to feel the pinch, more or less. It is Germany's hope that some of the allies will sue for a separate peace, but there is absolutely no indication of this at present. Each side seems just as determined to keep it as at first and the wearing out process goes on with grim determination. When the end comes some nation will have lost its prestige, but the neutral world doubts that any nation will have gained anything worth the awful cost of war.

POLICE CENSORS

Police Commissioner O'Meara of Boston must have forgotten a famous case in this city or else he would have been more specific in giving some recent orders to the Boston police relative to the supervision of dances. After discussion with the licensing board he issued an order that the police should supervise dances in hotels and all public places, and the order was interpreted to mean that in future a stern representative of the law in uniform should preside as an uninvited guest even at the most exclusive affairs. After considerable discussion it is stated that the police will not be expected to act as dance censors, the order merely asking that they report violations of the law.

The office of dance censor is no easy one as some members of our local force can testify. It is one thing to suspect that certain steps and evolutions are not proper but it is another thing to prove it. Even the most realistic imitations may not serve to convince the bench. Commissioner O'Meara is too sensible to expect that an officer will be present at social functions in any new capacity. As public dance halls it may be found advisable to employ dance matrons who may be able to prevent the ruin of some silly girls, but for the most part it is better for the police to leave the questions of dance censorship severely alone. There are some things in which it is easy to become ridiculous—and nobody likes that.

GAINS TO SCIENCE

Science will be richer after the war, which is a great incentive to scientific discovery. Unfortunately, at the present time the new knowledge is mostly used for the purposes of mutual destruction, but this will not always be so. Things learned in the conduct of aeroplanes and submarines and in trench defenses will make the world brighter and better. War surgery, too, has made wonderful strides. Amputations are effected with little trouble and with slight resultant loss of blood and many things hitherto considered impossible have been accomplished. Even in the haste of war, these things are noted and recorded with scientific accuracy, and they will be related to the medical students of the future as the great triumphs of a memorable epoch.

SEEN AND HEARD

There are some things we do not understand. One of them is the mad and almost universal desire to change the color of a merechaum pipe.

Admitted She Had Changed
"My wife is certainly hard to please!"
"She must have changed a heap since she married you."
"She certainly has, but how do you know—er, think you're funny, don't you?"—Houston Post.

In Real Life
"Tell me honestly," said the novel reader to the novel writer, "did you ever see a woman who stood and tapped the floor impatiently with her toe for several moments, as you describe?"
"Yes," was the thoughtful reply; "I did once."
"Who was she?"
"She was a clog-dancer!"—Stray Stories.

True Friendship
Two boys, one the possessor of a permit, were fishing on a certain estate when a game keeper suddenly darted from a thicket. The lad with the permit uttered a cry of fright, dropped his rod and ran off at top speed. The gamekeeper was led a swift chase. Then, worn out, the boy halted. The man seized him by the arm and said between pants:
"Have you a permit to fish on this estate?"
"Yes, to be sure," said the boy, quietly.
"You have? Then show it to me."
The boy drew the permit from his pocket. The man examined it and frowned in perplexity and anger.
"Why did you run when you had this permit?" he asked.
"To let the other boy get away," was the reply. "He didn't have none!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

To a Violinist
Applaud! A rapturous burst! Sprinkle downward from the gods, who see you first As you come bounding in. A little, fat, unconscious harlequin. Clutching your fiddle in your hand, Now in midstage you start, Hobnobbing and bowing jerkily. To left, to right, to left. And never for a moment still. We in the stalls, we smile to see How droll you look, and even when your deft, Quick fingers arouse the charm'd strings to your will, The laughter, lurking in our lachrymose eyes still, Beats back the elfin voices at our ears.

How like a boat your violin appears As, under lowered lids, our listless eyes Watch its alternate rise and fall and rise, Where, as the music sways, it seems To toss by the tempests on a fairy sea. And this strange sense, this sense of that, he a time at flood, is everywhere, Bearing up from depths unfathomed, Voices long imprisoned there, Voices of the singing birds that nattered unto happy tears, Lovers lingering in the twilight of how many thousand years, Voices meaning and intending of old sorrows, hopes and fears! Sounds of waves on craggy beaches and of winds that shout above, Melting down into a murmur, like the cooing of the dove, Rise again, and waxing stronger, swell into a chant of love. Round and round the waves of music sweep through this enchanted place. Catch the souls come forth to listen, trembling on each hearer's face. Draw them on and whirl them swiftly, lightly through the fields of dream. Till the music and its maker and the hearers are as one— And the masterwork is done!

Applause, spontaneous, springs, Pursues you to the wings And hales you out once more. Censor! Censor! Come back and bow, bow, how— You are not comic now.—Tom Daly in the Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

WOMAN IN BAD CONDITION

Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Montpelier, Vt.—"We have great faith in your remedies. I was very irregular and was tired and sleepy all the time, would have cold chills, and my hands and feet would be cold. My stomach bothered me, I had pain in my side and a bad headache most of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me lots of good and I now feel fine. I am regular, my stomach is better and my pains have all left me. You can use my name if you like. I am proud of what your remedies have done for me."—Mrs. MARY GAUTHIER, 21 Ridge St., Montpelier, Vt.

An Honest Dependable Medicine
It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for nearly forty years, and to-day hold a record for thousands upon thousands of actual cures, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to any of the women whose testimonial letters we are constantly publishing. They will tell you their experience and give you confidence to try the medicine.

HAT BLEACHER

Ladies' and gentlemen's felt, velvet and beaver hats bleached and relocked into the latest styles.
E. H. SEVIER, Inc., 133 Middle Street, Open Saturday and Monday Even.

ling appear a picture and sketch of A. E. Chapman, a southern Californian, who knows how to rid a whole community of flies. He has some rather original ideas, which may offer a suggestion or two for local use. Following is an extract from the article about him: "Mr. Chapman says that the bait is a very important part of the traps, for this special feast must be made more enticing than the odors from the kitchen. He has found that, although a great variety of foods can be used successfully, the attractiveness of any bait varies with the season. A food that drew thousands of flies at one time of year will not interest them in the least at other times. Fresh fruits in season are always good, but in the early summer the only really satisfactory bait is ground meat sprinkled with formaldehyde to keep it fresh. In his study of the habits of flies, Mr. Chapman has discovered one characteristic which he believes not only has enabled the fly to propagate its species but also has saved the human race from extinction. This pest has learned that young flies up to the end of the two-week period during which they lay no eggs have no taste nor desire for any food but the daintiest and freshest they can find; but that at the end of this period their taste undergoes a complete and radical change. By a wise selection of nature's food that can be found in refuse heaps decaying matter, or other places where instinct bids them lay their eggs. When you bait with stale fish, says Mr. Chapman, you fill your trap with old flies that in a probable have laid their full quota of eggs and whose days are numbered. In the beginning of a campaign a number of traps should be baited this way, but after you have got the advantage of the old flies, the majority of the traps should be baited with the nicest and freshest food and from available. Then you will be sure to catch the young flies before the laying period begins."

EARL OF SEAFIELD DEAD

CAPTAIN OF THIRD QUEEN'S OWN CAMERON HIGHLANDERS, SPECIAL RESERVE, KILLED

LONDON, Nov. 15.—James Ogilvie Grant, Earl of Seafield, has been killed in action in France.

The Earl of Seafield, who was born in 1875, was the 11th of his line, was a captain of the Third Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, special reserve, when the war began. He was married in 1898, to Miss Nina Townsend, daughter of Dr. J. P. Townsend, justice of the peace of the colony of New Zealand, who survives him with a daughter. The heir to the title is his brother, Hon. Trevor Ogilvie Grant. His daughter succeeds to the Scottish peerages.

BRUTALITY OF THE TURKS

Man From Asiatic Turkey Tells of Horrible Atrocities—Had Difficulty in Getting Here

The first word spoken in this city of the atrocities by the Turkish authorities by one who has witnessed them was spoken at the First Congregational church last night. The speaker was Prof. Theodore L. Elmer of Anatolia college, Marsovan, Asiatic Turkey, and his audience represented all of the Congregational churches in the city. Elmer had a narrow escape from Turkish horrors. He arrived in this country a few short weeks ago, having succeeded in getting away from Marsovan. He left there, he said, after a long and arduous journey. He had been sent into exile, or to death, or worse. He traveled five days by wagon to Angora, and was delayed there by government officials who took his passports. His passport was finally restored and went by the Anatolian railway to Constantinople. "On the way to Constantinople," he said, "we saw fully 50,000 Armenian women and children who were being driven into the wilderness, or who were to be taken to harems."

"The plot to exterminate the Armenian population of Turkey is a deep and dark thing, and it is carried out one. And the Christian sufferers of the first century never went through more terrible ordeals for their faith than have the Armenians who were taken bodily to Turkish harems. I had supposed it was impossible that such a thing could happen in the 20th century. I did not suppose that ever in my days I would see women huddled together in a room, as I saw in the principal rooms of our college in Marsovan, to be taken away to worse than death. And when Mrs. More, the wife of our ambassador, heard of this, she remonstrated with officials and they said to her: 'This amuses us.' I had never believed that I would hear of such a statement being made."

"Last April I was surprised to learn that one of our Armenian professors had been arrested by the gendarmes, together with several hundred other Armenians. He had, at one time, been a member of the National Armenian society, and some of those arrested with him had, also. But the young Turks had recognized this society, had considered it wholly legal, and for eight years there had not been the slightest objection to its existence. But it was a part of the policy of extermination which had been decided upon to arrest these men. They were kept in prison for six weeks, and were cruelly tortured. They were exposed to the bastinado, and were exposed to typhus, and finally the wife of my professor friend received word that he was dead. Not long afterward she was carried off into captivity, and whether she be dead or alive at the present time I do not know."

"During the month of May all of the Armenian young men were enlisted in the army, but they were not allowed to have arms. They were put at work digging trenches, or in the transport service. It was asserted by the authorities that this was done for political reasons. A few of those who were able to buy their exemption by paying 4 Turkish pounds were allowed to escape such service."

"In June all persons having firearms were told to give them up to the police. Now it was not an unusual thing for Armenians, as well as Turks, to have weapons in their possession, for after dark it was sometimes quite unsafe for the population to be out unless armed. All but a few of the Armenians gave up their arms, and they were put in a pile and photographed, and the photographs were exhibited as evidences of the attempt on the part of the Armenians to produce a revolution in Turkey. And yet the same quantity of arms could have been taken from the Turks. Those Armenians who did not give up their arms were tortured and one man in our city died of the tortures to which he had been subjected."

"Again, in June, 1213 of the older men were rounded up and were started for Mossan in Mesopotamia, which is about 600 miles from Marsovan. And we were told by the gendarmes that not one man in every 1000 would live to get there, and those who did could not subsist, as Mossan did not like Christians. And those men were started on their long journey across the desert. And I have never heard about them since."

"In the latter part of July the gendarmes went to the portions of Marsovan where the Armenians live, and gave the women and the children three days in which to get ready their belongings. They were told they were to be moved away. Day after day they were told, and day after day they were loaded into ox-carts. Off they went, and we heard of some being given up to the soldiers, of others being attacked by murderers and robbers, of many dying from thirst and hunger."

"Finally we became apprehensive of the college. And we had reason to be, for an official of the town notified us that all of the Armenian teachers and pupils of the college were about to be removed. We remonstrated, and finally a Greek teacher was sent to Constantinople, after the local authorities had been told to allow us to communicate with Ambassador Morgenthau. Later an English teacher was sent, and they saw Enver Pasha and Talat Bey. They promised the messengers that no harm should come to the pupils and teachers, that they would not be removed. And, after making such a promise, they sent a telegram to the governor of our province, telling him just the opposite. We went to the governor and he said he had received no word to spare our teachers or pupils and that he did not expect to receive any."

"And, within three days, 71 of the women were taken away from us. We pleaded with the gendarmes, but finally they effected an entrance into the enclosure, brought in ox-carts and took them away. These 71 were largely domestic and other workers. But back came the gendarmes again to take the pupils and teachers, and after we had held them off by parleying for a time, 53 were taken. That night a Turkish doctor came to us and told us that he did not approve of the policy of taking away the women. He said he was going to Constantinople and that he would act as escort for any three of the women of the college who wanted to get there to leave the country. We allowed three to go with him, but on the first night out he said that unless they would expose the faith of Islam and do what he wanted them to do, he would force them to go alone into the desert or come back to Marsovan. And back they came to Marsovan."

"When they got back they wanted to go with the batch of 63 who had been taken by the gendarmes the day previously. Although the party had got a day's start, they went after them. Later two of our American teachers set after them, and came up with the party. They were turned back after a time, but succeeded in getting swift horses. Again they overtook the party, but when they reached them 21 had been taken away by the soldiers, and one had died of her wounds. The two teachers then succeeded in bringing the 41 remaining back to our college in Marsovan. Of the first party of 70 no word was ever received. This rescue of the teachers and pupils by two brave American teachers is the only bright spot in the recent history of that portion of Turkey, of which I have heard."

THE ART OF WEARING JEWELRY

Jewels and the opera have been the theme for many a dissertation on gems, wealth and costuming, but the main reason for jewels at the opera has generally been overlooked. The fact is that sitting in a theatre or opera box is like sitting for one's photograph with all the rest of the house looking on. Jewels must be elaborate to be seen at that range, and gowns must be striking to be noticeable at all. Bare shoulders, high coll and sleeveless bodices will be dominating notes in these pictures this winter and there is more chance than ever for showing off one's handiwork jewels. Bands will be worn low about the brow, collars and heavily jeweled necklaces about the throat, rings set with enormous gems, bracelets anywhere on the arm from the shoulder to the wrist, earrings that are really ear-pendants, long with swinging gems—all these and more will be worn. Brocade velvets, embroidered satins and both satin and velvet combined in multi-colored flower patterns will hold forth in all their splendor. With black as a relief these damask satins will make their mark in onyx and diamonds are used on the gleaming white of the shoulders and arms. Cut onyx in collar and bracelets, with the sparkle and fire of large diamonds and the soft, lustrous sheen of pearls, will gain admiration as nothing else could with these brilliant opera gowns. Let the plain-toned costume be worn with the colored gem and the many-colored gown with the clear white of the diamonds.

A noteworthy example of fine jewelry tastefully chosen is a set of three necklaces and pair of bracelets of carved platinum set with diamonds and emeralds for the foil of orange velvet, and another equally attractive arrangement was made in cerise velvet and sapphires.

The new silks include a feather-weight charmeuse, taffetas noted for their novel patterns and gorgeous colors, and the list of corded silks, grosgrain, surah, beige moire, and the grove de Londres and the very newest, froc de Lucile. These are of varying weights and textures so that it is hard to advise about the accompanying jewelry, but if these materials are taken to the jeweler, the matter may soon be settled with the greatest satisfaction. In color the new silks run the gamut, so the only question to be decided in that line is whether there is to be a true match or a harmonious contrast.

Satins
The satins are heavier in most instances than the silks, but to be contrary to the rule, there are to be found some exquisite satins of very light weight that will fall in folds like the softest chiffon. The plain, solid colors are here, also interrupted in their long season of favoritism to make way for the figures, stripes and appliqued embroidered and brocade satins.

Damask, one of the luxurious tinsel and satin brocades, is the perfect material against which to contrast jewels. Two or more colors may be used in its weave with a gold or silver thread, and this gives the keynote for the jewelry.

All the brilliant embroideries are adaptable and easily contrasted in jewels on account of the numerous colors they employ, and they are excellent as a trimming on an otherwise solid-color costume to throw jewels into relief.

Other Fabrics
Chiffons, tulle and lace and all sheer fabrics for evening wear will only take the daintiest mountings as their accompaniment. Large gems and heavy settings are out of the question with such materials. Well designed jewels set with semi-precious stones will look their best on such goods, but if there is the least amount of claret or solid looking heaviness in gems or mountings, the effect is ruined. This line of goods is combined best with platinum wire work, which, as all the leading colors are available, may be set with any faceted, transparent or translucent gem.

The main aim to work for and to always bear in mind is to have continuity of idea throughout between material and jewelry.

One could give many examples of consistency between jewelry and costume, but the manner of gaining the desired effect is endless. It is what women are going to wear as a background for the manufacturer's wares that is going henceforth to control his output, and this season, with very decided tastes already shown, is an excellent time to put appropriate jewelry into use.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Margaret Harwood, who was graduated from Radcliffe in 1907 and later at Harvard Observatory in 1912, has been appointed for an indefinite period as a fellow of the Nantucket Maria Mitchell association, where she has held the astronomical fellowship award since 1912. She is studying this in the University of California and will take up her duties at Nantucket next year at the Nantucket observatory.

LADY LOOKABOUT

I smile to myself when I take up a certain Boston paper and look at the cartoons of the Bay State hearings in which City Solicitor Hennessy figures so prominently. It had never struck me before, but in "Norman's" sketches, Mr. Hennessy's resemblance to "The Man Who Made Sweet Adeline Famous" is more than passing—it is extraordinary. Incidentally, Mr. Hennessy is receiving much favorable press notices for the well trained mind he brings to bear when the occasion arises.

The Dugout Man

Click, click, clickety-click, sounded a pair of tiny French heels on the new cement sidewalk on Merrimack street, and the daintiest little lady, clad in satiny brown chiffon broadcloth with lots and lots of fur and more buttons, tripped into the square. Turning her back to the line-up of curious onlookers, (I almost wrote "gentlemen.") Would it have been funny? she studied D. L. Page's window of wonderful dainties. At the same moment my glance fell upon one of the aforesaid gentry. "Attention!" was written all over him. His shoulders well braced, his head thrust forward, you could almost feel the dotted lines that shot from his eyes already popping out of his head to the little lady's French heels. Involuntarily, my glance followed his, and at once I discerned the cause of his agitation. She wore pantalettes! Tiny and modest and trimmed with fur, they peeped shyly from below the hem of the gown they matched. They were the first I had seen outside a fashion book, and I was dying to decide whether or not I liked them, when my gaze returned to the man in the doorway. The dotted lines were very much in evidence, and only that his eyes were well anchored in their sockets I fear he would have lost them altogether. Positively they were hanging out on his cheeks, and if the little lady had not at that moment succumbed to the call of caramels and walnut creams, and entered the store, I should have trembled for his sight. I was not a fictionist, either; for even now, nearly a week later, I have not decided whether I shall adopt the style, despite its attractiveness.

P. S.—You understand, of course, that the man simply wanted to be able to tell his wife all about it. Apart from that, you could tell by his very attitude he was not interested in a bit. He qualified all right, I'll vouch for that!

The Industrial Show

The promoters of the Industrial exposition in progress at the Casino are a creditable spirit of far-sightedness in inviting the school children of the city to be their guests. It is most desirable that the adults of the city become acquainted with the resources, invested capital, products, industries and possibilities of their home city, but it is of vastly greater importance that these features be fixed in a graphic manner in the minds of the boys and girls who shall be the men and women of the future. There always has been a tendency among the youth of the city to decry what they in their ignorance and inexperience were pleased to call the lack of opportunity in Lowell. This false idea has gradually given way to a respect for the home city and her possibilities, and the credit should be given where it is due, fully belongs—to the Lowell board of trade, and its competent secretary, Mr. John H. Murphy. Through that active body Lowell has come to be recognized as "The City of Opportunity," and the results are to be seen on all sides in increased prosperity.

Admires the Soldier

Morning after morning for the past few days, I have been awakened by the heavy rumble of army wagons on the street outside my house. Great, strong vehicles they are, drawn by two and sometimes four strong horses. A soldier in khaki holds the reins, and in nearly every case he seems hardly more than a boy. One of them I have seen two or three times, and his round young face and his broad young shoulders return to my mind again and again through the day. He whistles a tender, haunting little air, always the same one. I am not musical enough to recognize it, but this I know is not a martial air as one would naturally expect. Instead, it hints of love, and hope, and someone waiting far off, and something deep within me rises up in silent protest at the thought of that youth and hundreds of thousands of others like him who may soon be called upon to give up their lives on the battlefield. Truly, it is a sobering thought, but one which persistently forces itself upon each of us at this time.

The Jitney Cold

The most fashionable ailment in a certain section of the city at the present time is the "jitney cold." All you have to do to get one is just forget to wear your raincoat some day when you board one of the vehicles. It is amazingly easy. The symptoms are those of an ordinary cold, only much more so. First aid may be rendered by a pocket handkerchief. Scientific packing has done much to reduce the liability, but the chances of escaping it wholly are small if in the process of packing you draw a position in the top layer. There is an excellent opportunity for some enterprising young man, commercially inclined, to place on the market a "jitney cough drop," guaranteed to have all the accomplishments of the ordinary cough drop, plus the certainty of correcting bent limbs, curvature of the spine, and cracked ribs. Who is going to do it?

As to Barring Aliens

One cannot but feel that Henry L. Higginson, a leading broker of Boston, and whose firm handled the Anglo-French loan, strikes a popular note when he advocates barring from this country all aliens whose governments will not allow them to renounce loyalty to their native lands. Naturalization is made altogether too easy for the alien. All he has to do is declare his intention of becoming a bona fide citizen, and he becomes a citizen with all the privileges of a native born, save that of holding the office of chief executive of the nation. At the same time, his native land may not look upon his allegiance to the land of his birth as anything but a betrayal. Some nations refuse to release its citizens from loyalty to it. This was the real cause of the War of 1812. England insisted that no British subject could become an American.

Such citizens are a liability to the United States rather than an asset, and they may well be barred from our shores.

THE FRENCH MAID SAYS:

PROPER CARE OF YOUR SHOES

"Oh dear, my shoes get shabby so quickly," sighed Marjorie, as she watched Marie go very carefully putting away some of Madame's fine footwear.

"Perhaps you don't take proper care of your shoes," ventured Marie. "There are ways and means by which boots and shoes can be made to last twice as long as ordinarily. For instance, never put them near a fire to dry. When with dry and stand them in a warm room, but not near a fire or intense heat.

"Boot trees may be purchased and they will make your boots last much longer and they will keep their shape almost until really worn to shreds. It is a good idea to waterproof boots before wearing them and it is easily done. Buy some clear copal varnish and a soft brush. Give the soles a thin coating with the varnish and set the boots on a shelf. With the soles upward, to dry. Then, in two days, give them another coat and let that get quite dry.

"Many people throw away boots and shoes and they have plenty of good use still in them if brown boots become very stained and greasy, cover them with French chalk and leave for twenty-four hours, then wipe off and polish with brown shoe polish. Shabby brown boots can also be blackened by a mixture of an ounce of ivory black and the juice of a lemon and gradually adding enough warm vinegar to make it the consistency of thin cream.

"Clean the boots with a little warm water and soap, then let them dry and paint with the dye. Let them alone for a day and then give them another coat. Then leave another twenty-four hours and give them a polish with black boot cream."

THE TIRED BUSINESS GIRL

How many there are every night of the tired business girls who drag themselves wearily home at night with aching feet, their feet too tired to pay any attention to their personal appearance even, and many times too tired to take up duties for their person which might result in a very great added measure of beauty.

As tired as you are, as disinterested as you feel, try this method of refreshing yourself and you will be refreshed at the result. If you have not time or cannot stand a cold bath, bathe the face and arms in hot water and then in icy cold, alternating several times. The feet, too, should be bathed in cold water with a sprinkling of salt. Many prefer to add half a cup of vinegar to the water when the feet are tired.

Lay aside your business dress and slip into something soft and fluffy. Arrange your hair loosely. Put fresh stockings on the refreshed feet and a pair of soft slippers. You will be surprised at the invigorating change that has taken place. The constant practice of this habit will make it soon become a pleasure.

Instead of throwing yourself upon the bed and then appearing at the dinner or supper table with ink stained fingers and tousled hair, you will be an ornament to the family gathering, and a comfort to yourself and all others around you.

WHAT THE COOK SAYS

I found Cook in the dining room this morning polishing off the dining table on which a bad mark had been left from a hot dish. "Why the mark is all off, Cook?" I exclaimed. "What did you use?"

"Oh, she answered, 'just a thin paste made of salad oil and salt. I spread it over the marked place and left it for an hour or more, then rubbed it off with a soft cloth."

I told Cook that her pudding the night before was splendid but I was puzzled as to how she steamed it without a steamer. "That was very easy," she answered. "When a pudding is to be steamed and a steamer is not available, put the pudding in a well greased mould I place a piece of paper over the top and put it in a saucepan with enough boiling water to cover about half way up the mould. Then I cover closely and keep the water simmering until the pudding is cooked."

The Cook complained this morning that the ice man did not call and therefore there was no ice for tea water.

"But," she said smilingly, "I have made some ice water just the same." She filled an unglazed earthenware jug with cold water and stood it in a soup plate filled with water. Then she soaked a clean kitchen towel with cold water and wrapped it around the jug, allowing the ends of the cloth to rest in the soup plate. In this way it became icy cold in a very short time.

I found Cook grinding away at the mincing machine, and I remarked that I thought she was going to take it apart and clean it before she used it again. "You don't have to do that," she said. "I know of a better way to clean the machine. It is very difficult to clean the inside so I am grinding stale pieces of bread through it. This collects all grease, fat and skin from the small knives. Then I wipe it thoroughly with a clean cloth."

"Are you not going to rub the cut glass?" I asked Cook, as I found her drying my most valuable pieces with a cloth. "There is no need of it," she answered, "as I always wash the cut glass in the following way: Place the article in a pan of soft water to which a little bluing has been added, and scrub it with a brush. Dry with a soft cloth and you can get a fine polish without rubbing."

When I started to leave, Cook grabbed a towel and began to swing it wildly about her head. I thought she had gone crazy but she soon explained her actions.

"If a room becomes filled with smoke," she said, "a towel dipped in vinegar and water and wrung out, then taken and thrown about one's head through the room, will remove all smoke in a few moments. A small portion of vinegar in a very little water will be sufficient for the purpose."

As I went to the kitchen today Cook was making soap jelly which she says she likes to have on hand, as it is much better for many things than the hard soap. She says it should not be made too long beforehand as, if kept more than a week, it loses its strength.

The quantities used are a quarter of a pound of soap to each quart of water. Take then, as much soap as you think will be needed and shred it fine with a knife, putting it into a saucepan with the water to melt slowly until it is clear and without lumps. Then pour it off into a jar and let it remain until required. When melting the soap do not boil it quickly and do not fill the saucepan, even though you mean to have a big wash, as the soap is a very liable to boil away. This will not only waste it but will cause a very unpleasant odor in the house.

"However can you wash this silk waist so it will look good?" I asked Cook today. "That is very easy," she answered. "I will get ready three bowls of luke warm water and into two of these put some soap jelly. Into the first one I will plunge the waist having the right side uppermost, and then squeeze the soapy water gently through the fabric, keeping the waist well under the water and paying special attention to the neck, wrists and armholes. When it is well washed in the first water, squeeze well.

"Do not wring it but turn out the wrong side and repeat the process of washing in the second bowl. When well washed, squeeze, shake and rinse in clear warm water to remove the soap."

"Should the waist get dry before it is ironed, dip it in clean cold water and roll it in a cloth. Do not sprinkle water over it as that would make it look rough and blotchy when ironed. When finished, fold the waist neatly so as not to crease it, and put it out to air."

soap; if put at once into cold water the soap might cling to the silk. After rinsing thoroughly in the warm water, rinse in cold running water. To make white silk a good color it should be rinsed in blue water.

Cook irons my wash silk dresses and waists so beautifully that I asked her how she did them and she told me as follows: "Silk must be ironed quite damp or it will have a rough, unfinished appearance. Use a moderately warm iron and place a piece of muslin between it and the right side of the silk. A hot iron yellows the silk and gives a crimped rough appearance. Should the waist get dry before it is ironed, dip it in clean cold water and roll it in a cloth. Do not sprinkle water over it as that would make it look rough and blotchy when ironed. When finished, fold the waist neatly so as not to crease it, and put it out to air."

KITCHENER HAS POWER TO DEAL WITH GREECE

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The reported mission of Field Marshal Earl Kitchener to King Constantine of Greece has evoked considerable comment in the London newspapers. They almost unanimously agree that Great Britain has taken the best possible means of bringing Greece to a definite decision as to the role she is to play in the Balkan conflict and ending once and for all the uncertainty and unsteadiness which have followed in the wake of what are alluded to as Greece's political and constitutional vagaries.

The Pall Mall Gazette, voicing what appears to be the general view, says: "It seems probable that Earl Kitchener has gone out armed with full powers to bring its tortuous ruler (referring to King Constantine) face to face with distinctive alternatives. He has long enough been permitted to enjoy the immunities of a neutral while employing every sleight of hand to make worse the situation of the entente powers. The assumption of friendly neutrality by his latest cabinet, also, is not worth the paper or the breath that conveys them, in view of the gross treachery that has been perpetrated towards Serbia."

"Earl Kitchener has encountered this truly Byzantine type of character in other regions and should understand how to bring it to a reckoning. Earl Kitchener's mission has completely steadied feeling in the allied nations over the Balkan difficulties."

SAD FATALITY

Child Killed by an Auto Under Most Distressing Circumstances

An automobile fatality, the circumstances of which were particularly distressing, occurred in Middlesex street, near South, about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when Stephen Jakubczak, aged 4 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jakubczak, of 184 Middlesex street, was killed when a stone's throw from his home, and before the horror-stricken gaze of his mother.

The automobile was owned by Mrs. Rose Gilbride, widow of the late Patrick Gilbride, who was in the machine accompanied by Mrs. John J. Burns, The chauffeur, Mr. Charles Guthrie, made a heroic but vain effort to avert the collision placing his own life in jeopardy.

Immediately after the accident Mr. Guthrie surrendered himself at the police station and was released under $100 on the customary criminal charge of manslaughter, though eyewitnesses to the sad affair not only exonerated him from any blame, but tender him the highest praise for his attempt to save the child.

It will be recalled that only a few days ago, the 10-year-old son of Mrs. John J. Burns was killed by a fall from a bicycle, sustaining concussion of the brain, which resulted in death after a few hours.

The automobile was proceeding along Middlesex street at a very moderate rate of speed when at the junction of South street the Jakubczak boy, without warning, ran out from the sidewalk directly in the path of the auto. The chauffeur in his efforts to avoid striking the child drove his car onto the sidewalk, the front part of the machine crashing through the window of William Scott, the tobacconist. When the crash came the rear of the car swung around with terrific force, crushing the child against an iron trolley pole. The boy's head was caught between the pole and the car and was terribly crushed, death occurring almost instantaneously. Mrs. Gilbride and Mrs. Burns received slight cuts from the flying glass, but both were completely unharmed by the affair. They were attended by their homes by their family physicians.

Guthrie, the chauffeur, received serious injury, though he was quite well as the result of the nervous shock, and plainly showed the effects of the strain when he arrived at the police station. The mother of the victim was on the scene in an instant having been only a short distance away and her plight was pitiable. The body was removed to the rooms of Undertaker McDonough and later was taken in charge by an Undertaker Albert.

DIDN'T LOSE HER HEAD

LAWRENCE, Nov. 15.—Placing her own life at stake, and also the life of a woman passenger, Mrs. Margaret P. Pepin of this city, avoided a threatened collision at Haverhill and Lawrence sts., this city, Saturday morning by turning her Chevrolet roadster out of its course and into a brick wall. The machine was not moving rapidly and the occupants were saved from injury.

Mrs. Pepin was operating her machine in a northerly direction on Lawrence street and was proceeding at slow speed. As the machine neared Haverhill street a motor roadster put in an appearance from Haverhill street, and it appeared as though a collision was unavoidable.

The woman thought quickly and turned so sharply, according to eyewitnesses, that the machine grazed the head of a passing horse, and the machine was taken to a repair shop.

Immediately after the accident Mrs. Pepin went to police headquarters and reported the accident.

ROOT OUT FAVORITISM

Due to Report on Men Fit for Military Service Who are Occupying Interior Positions

PARIS, Nov. 14, 11:05 p. m.—A league has been formed here by the parents of six hundred soldiers who are serving at the front, with the object of ferreting out and reporting to Minister of War Gallieni cases where young men fit for military service are occupying positions in the interior which are made more or less sinecures through the influence of powerful friends and the persons who are protecting them. The league hopes to co-operate in this way with M. Gallieni's campaign to root out favoritism.

ADVANCES AT OPENING

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The speculative character of the trading in specialties was again demonstrated at today's opening, Studebaker scoring an initial advance of seven points at 170, only to react to 164 soon after. Baldwin Locomotive rose a point, with similar gains for Crucible Steel, Colorado Fuel, Tennessee Copper and other shares of the same group. U. S. Steel rose 3-5 to 85 and immediately relinquished its advance. Willam Overland rose 7 to 55 and other automobile issues, including Packard, were higher. Rails again were an inconspicuous feature. By 10:30 o'clock most advances were lost.

Recoveries from general declines of the first half of the morning were followed by a considerable trading in substantial advances in low priced rails, chiefly Rock Island, Erie, and the so-called Gould group. Specialties and United States Steel showed further irregularities, however. Studebaker making up most of its reversal, only to decline again. Coppers also were uneven, American Smelting losing its point advance while Anaconda rose 1-5 to 39 and Utah 1-1 to 74, both new records. Metallic Marine pld, 6-1 to 61 1/2. At midday the heaviness of Steel produced reactions elsewhere. Bonds were strong.

The stock at noon was attributed to rumors of an attack upon an English liner. All gains were cancelled until it became known that the rumors were baseless, after which recoveries ensued.

Coppers led another temporary recovery in the last hour but fresh selling again effaced advances. The closing was irregular.

The bride wore white satin trimmed with chiffon and carried bridal roses. The couple were attended by Olivia Millette, brother of the bridegroom, and Ovide Lessard, uncle of the bride. A reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's brother, Olivia Millette, 11 Montcalm avenue, where the couple will make their home.

Ayotte-Jalbert

A pretty marriage took place this morning, when William Ayotte and Marie Jalbert, two well known young people of this city, were married, the ceremony being performed at a nuptial mass celebrated at St. Joseph's church at 1 o'clock by Rev. Joseph Deane, O.M.I. The bride wore white silk trimmed with lace, and she carried bridal roses. She was attended by her father, Joseph Jalbert, while the bridegroom's witness was his father, George Ayotte. The bridesmaid was a cousin of the bride, Miss Anna Jalbert, who wore pink crepe de chine and carried pink roses. The couple were followed by a large party of guests, including a nephew of the bride, Rosario Jalbert. At the close of the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jalbert, 100 Fourth avenue, where a wedding dinner was served, followed by a reception. Among the guests were relatives from Taunton and Boston. The happy couple will leave this evening for New York. They will also visit relatives in Taunton and Providence. After Dec. 1 they will be at home to their friends at 109 Fourth avenue.

FIRE IN BILERICA

An unoccupied house belonging to Frank W. Crosby of Bilerica and located near Mason's corner, about two miles below the centre was destroyed by fire shortly after 3 o'clock last evening. The fire was discovered by residents of the vicinity and the bell alarm at Bilerica Centre was followed by an alarm from box 15 on the fire whistle at the car shops. The fire department had a long run and when the apparatus arrived the building had been ruined.

TAKEN AFTER BATTLE

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—After an exchange of 30 shots the police yesterday invaded and captured Capt. Geo. Wellington "Streeters" "District of Lake Michigan," a plot of filled-in land on the shore of Lake Michigan, where until yesterday Strecker had successfully defied the officers who sought to arrest him on a charge of violating the Sunday closing order.

General opinion is that Strecker was on the shore of the British Isles, on account of the British failure.

INDUSTRIAL AND STORE NEWS

From official figures it is shown that 13,538,440 pounds of wool and woolsens were shipped here from England during the month of October.

The Loomfords union will meet tonight in Carpenters hall, Runels building. Business of considerable importance will come up for transaction.

The Monomac Spinning company of Lawrence will increase its equipment to 10,000 spindles. The mill makes French spun worsted and merino yarns.

Franklin Williams, the well known architect, will play left end and Harry Snyder, right end, for the Warren club team in the remaining games of the season. Edward Barrington has been chosen cheer leader.

Lawrence unions are up in arms over the proposed increase in the Bay State street railway fares. Last week they voted to draw up a letter of protest and send it immediately to the chief officials of the company.

Frank Brown, who was an overseer of weaving in Monson, Mass., and who resigned recently with his wife and family to this city where he secured employment with one of the local mills.

A well known textile publication says another "days" supply of dyes is expected in port very soon, but even this shipment will prove but a "drop in the bucket," compared with what is needed here for mill operation in a normal way.

Lancashire, Eng., cotton mills production cotton waste worth at least $16,000,000 per annum. The vast sum is represented by the ends, sweepings, pickings and combings. Thousands of women are employed sorting the cotton.

The Bay State mills are very busy, and it is reported that some of the departments will be operated nights within a short time. The local mills are owned by the American Woolen Co., which is doing an unprecedented business.

The coal teamsters of Lawrence want a reduction in working hours. The teamsters work ten hours a day at the present time and they demand a 3-hour day. A committee has been appointed to interview the coal dealers in regard to the wage increase.

The Tremont & Suffolk mills have declared a semi-annual dividend of $2 per share, payable today. The new addition which will replace the old fire room and chimney, is expected to be ready for occupancy by the first of spring.

The much heralded contest for the trusteeship of the Barnard mills of Lowell will all end at the annual meeting of the corporation last week. Edward Newton was chosen for the next year without opposition.

The Nashua textile workers who have been out on strike for the past two months have rejected the offer of the mill agents to return to work pending an adjustment of wages in the departments where the wages were found to be below the level paid elsewhere.

The shoe concerns of the city still continue to run prosperously. Of them it is shown that the shoe makers are running full time days. No order from the foreign belligerents have been reported. Several local cutters have been offered fancy wages to go out of town.

Agent Wadleigh of the Merrimack mills was doing jury work in Boston last week. Saturday he officially announced to a Sun representative that the printing plant of the company had been sold to the Pacific Mills of Lawrence, and mentioned in reference to extending the dye works was also given in Saturday's paper.

Pilling Factory Extension

The John Pilling Shoe company has started an addition to its factory on Shaffer street. The new building will be 100 feet long and 50 feet wide. It will be two stories in height, and the foundation will be able to carry an additional two stories. There will be an elevator on the main building, of one story and basement, which will be used as a stockroom. The new structure will be of heavy brick mill construction. It will employ 150 additional hands.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

OPERA HOUSE

"Fine Feathers" which will be presented at the Opera House, this week, by the Emerson players, is a big play, big with facts of life. Emulating the same bitter logic which "Gunga" used, the author, George Leura to see "The East-End Way," and with that same power for revealing the sordid details of a life bound by the chains of narrow circumstances so marked in the first act of "Paid in Full," this virile young dramatist has once more reached the heights of real achievement.

Mr. Walter has made a great play and has had the courage to drive home with a straight-arm blow the simple theme that the wages of sin are death. From the wretched little hat of a miserable material, little State young woman's $25 a week husband has given her for the butcher's bill, down to the finish of the play, with its thrilling scenes is wonderfully told.

The incident of the hat may be laughable in the beginning and indeed it is, but with the relentless advance of the deadly Mrs. Walter has given an object lesson in reality. The play coming at the flood-tide of graft exposures, goes steps beyond and shows a certain part of Little New York herself, and points to the deep rot of grafting as germinated and nourished within the bosom of those who have forgotten the emotions for the gratification of the lust of things. The hat which first reveals to us an attitude towards life, is worn by the wife of Bob Reynolds, (Homer Barton), Mrs. Reynolds, played most realistically by Ann O'Day, is distinguished with the State Island home which her husband is trying to pay for. The more or less stolen trips to matinees in New York and even the most unusual absence of the quarter for the gas meter have disgusted the girl with the simple life. She longs for the opportunity which the young man had dreamed was to save them. This comes soon after the husband has forgiven the wife for her conversion of the tradesman's money, in the person of John Brand, a Cornell classmate of Reynolds, who has succeeded in big business, who Mrs. Reynolds has requested a conscientious chemist $125 a week with a firm engaged in the construction of public works. Brand's house is to supply the cement used in the big dam of the type at Johnstown. He offers Reynolds $40,000 a year, the $200,000 his firm will make, a lower grade of cement, but a finished upon the dam builders. He pleads that this is only a shrewd device of a big business, that the lower grade of cement would last under ordinary conditions for one hundred years, and the dam would be rebuilt long before that time, so no one would be hurt by the Reynolds as chemist. In this specious argument, he is ably backed by the wife

CHILD GETS SICK
CROSS FEVERISH
IF CONSTIPATED

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach or bowels.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! Is coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or other children's ailments, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and so that you are made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

the week, catch the fancy of Lowell audiences, for he is very much the real thing. He gives satisfaction to too which are declared to be very wonderful.

Irwin and Herzog are up-to-the-minute singing comedians, who have a full lot of new stuff to offer. Miss Bussie's toy terriers are likeable little dogs, who are lot of fun to watch. Pearl, one of the most highly educated of canines is a particular star of the comedians. Adriel Brothers are novelty comedians, who are perfect types of developed "manhood." Their comedy, the Hagar-Sell News Pictorial with give a new batch of views dealing with current topics.

Good seats may be ordered in advance at the box office. The telephone number is 25.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

Mary Pickford in her latest release which is a true Mary Pickford success, will be in the Merrimack Square theatre today, tomorrow and Wednesday. "Madame Butterfly" is the title of the play in which she is the apple of the screen adaptation of the famous opera by Puccini. All the poetic beauty of this sad story is preserved in the Famous Players filmation.

The pathetic story of Cho-Cho-San "Madame Butterfly," as her treacherous American husband calls her—is a story of great artistic value. There is a presence of shadowy idealism in the staging of the production, which has been accomplished with the assistance of specially engaged authorities on Japanese customs and manners. For settings, the most beautiful Japanese gardens in America were used.

It is an interesting coincidence that Mary Pickford, the idol of the motion picture world, should make her first maiden in this role of an Oriental. The first work of an American actress to have the distinction of being adapted to star in the silent film world is the famous role of Cho-Cho-San, the wisest selection that could be made will be the perfect of every one who sees this appealing and gripping production. It requires the highest grace, the pliancy and the distinctness of the public to win the sympathy of an actress of Miss Pickford's rank and only an actress of Miss Pickford's rank could have personally faced the ordeal of presenting in particular a character with which the public has already become familiar through the media of the opera, play and novel, and which, therefore, already has the highest standard of comparisons. With preconceived notions of this beloved sympathy, the actress of Miss Pickford was confronted by one of the most difficult tasks that a motion picture actress has ever been called upon to meet. Beulah Mary Pickford's appearance in her most recent triumph, the "Madame Butterfly" serial will also be shown. The serial is a story of the pursuit of an American couple. A comedy of the more enjoyable sort, and the Pathe company in the latest events of importance. The serial will be shown on Wednesday at the Merrimack Square theatre, with brand new offerings.

"Madame Butterfly" is the second of the Paramount features booked for this week. The serial will be shown on Wednesday at the Merrimack Square theatre, with brand new offerings.

On today and tomorrow, the management of the Royal theatre will present to the moving picture fans of this city the most wonderful production seen in many days. This picture, "Vanity Fair," is a part of the masterpieces, starring Mrs. Fiske, the greatest actress the American stage has ever known. One must see this film to realize the painstaking care and heavy expense represented by this masterpiece. In addition to the engagement of Mrs. Fiske herself, no expense was spared in matters of casts and "sets," some four hundred odd persons having been employed in the making of the various scenes. The battle of Waterloo and all the incidents of the novel are vividly pictured in the most interesting in motion pictures. Her desire to perpetuate her "Becky Sharp" was the principal reason for her appearing in this film and it is probable that she will again be seen in motion pictures. No real opportunity will miss the opportunity of seeing this wonderful picture at the Royal today or tomorrow as it shows the greatest star in America in the picture.

The popular actress Valli Valli supported by Edward Brennan and Marie Empress, will be seen at the Owl theatre today and tomorrow in the powerful motion picture "The Woman Pays." This feature film is a story of a distinctive quality, and in it this great emotional star has many chances to display the wonderful talent that has made her so popular with the movie fans.

The "Woman Pays" tells the story of a dashing widow, who in order to win a married man for her own, enlists the aid of a wealthy broker whom she knows has cast longing glances at the man's wife. As a result of their well-laid plans, the happy young couple are driven far from home. For a while the lives of both are ruined, but finally, amid the wreckage of their lives, they find each other again and happiness once more reigns supreme. This interesting story is told in five vivid acts consisting of over three hundred scenes.

In conjunction with the feature picture, three short films and four other excellent photoplays will also be presented at the Owl theatre today and tomorrow.

JEWELL THEATRE

A sensational war film entitled "Pro Patria," one of the world's greatest masterpieces in motion pictures, is being presented at the Jewell theatre today and tomorrow as a special attraction, besides the five usual Mutual movie shows. The picture "Pro Patria" comes from Lowell, under the direction of the great director, and it will prove one of the greatest attractions ever seen on the local screen. Powerful dramatic, wonderful scenes of war, stirring action, and beautiful love story, all in one, and it is a masterpiece. It is a story of a man who is captured by the enemy, and who is held in a prison, and who is later rescued by his friends.

MOVEMENT OF GRAIN

PROBABLY THE GREATEST THE WORLD HAS EVER WITNESSED

NOW IN PROGRESS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—What is probably the greatest movement of grain the world has ever witnessed, is now in progress, imperceptibly being given to the movement by the impending close of navigation on the Great Lakes. In Philadelphia, not only are all the elevators filled to their utmost capacity, but there are more than a thousand cars of grain on the railroad tracks awaiting their turn to unload.

In addition to the regular trans-Atlantic mail service, the United States mail is being carried by the great steamships of the United States mail line, which are due at this port to load grain. In all the westward bound head headed for Philadelphia has a carrying capacity of more than 5,000,000 bushels.

Ocean freight rates continue to advance daily. Rumors are current that the Italian government will soon call many of her vessels home for war purposes. This would intensify the lack of tonnage with a corresponding increase in rates.

After Church Vote

Mayor Murphy's press agent in his effort to convince the church people that his honor is the candidate for them to vote for, quotes a letter written some months ago, by Rev. C. T. Billings, complimenting his honor on the manner in which he presided over a meeting at which the Fourth of July celebration was under discussion; and also a letter from the Floyd Bible class of the First Baptist church complimenting him for his alleged law-enforcement. But both letters were written before his honor went back on his one-term promise.

Memorial Building Insurance

Mayor Murphy's press agent in calling attention to the systematic manner in which the city's insurance is recorded at city hall, as brought out by the Memorial Building fire, recalls the fact that it was Mayor O'Donnell who gave the insurance on the Memorial Building, as a result of which the city now benefits. Up to the time of Mayor O'Donnell's incumbency neither city hall nor the Memorial Building was adequately insured, while under O'Donnell's administration the office there had never been a dollar's worth of insurance on the police station with its valuable Gamewell system.

A Busy Sunday

There were but few of the candidates who didn't have somewhere to go yesterday, for there were club gatherings, galas. In one case, a couple of candidates put in an appearance at a meeting of an organization which admits none but members, and were obliged to go away without addressing the meeting. They had been invited to be present under a misapprehension, and were not trying to "butt in." Daniel Cosgrove had a meeting of his own at Carpenters hall.

Will the Women Come Out?

Some politicians are of the opinion that the interest aroused in women suffrage during the state campaign will result in women more generally taking advantage of their right in this state, to vote on the school board. There are slightly over 7000 women registered in this city, but they don't all go to the polls.

Got Big Crowd

Jackson Palmer had a big crowd Saturday night and he warned them up with his talk about the low wages paid at the Cannery and the needs of the Locks & Canals. Jackson, I am informed, paid his respects to The Spellbinder for not giving him more publicity, despite the fact that in some quarters we've been accused of giving him too much. But then, one can't please everybody.

Weather Conditions Look Bad

As they contemplated the perfect weather of last week, the spirits of the candidates rose high, in anticipation of inviting conditions for out-door campaigning during the closing days of the anti-primary campaign. But today's discouraging prospects have caused much disappointment.

A Public Hall

Watch out for a renewed demand for a public hall in Lowell as the result of the two additional industrial exhibitions at the Casino. The Casino was the only place in Lowell at all adequate to the demands of the exhibition, and to secure the board of enterprise not only had to cause another enterprise temporarily to suspend operations, but had to go to the expense of strengthening the floor supports of the Casino. The crowds that undoubtedly will attend the exhibition will tax the capacity of that resort, despite the fact that the show runs for five nights. All of which surely means that the city government will be asked to consider the proposition of erecting a public hall, along with the hold-over propositions wished onto it by the dilatory administration of the current year, the hospital, the bridge, the high school and Dummer street extension.

Gambling Joint Unleashed

The Spellbinder has had information for some time relative to the alleged gambling joint raided last night by the police. The police have also had information, the place having been complained of for some time. No action was taken by the police however, until last night, the closing week of the campaign. Gambling in Lowell is worse than it ever was. The police may have stopped certain gamblers, but there have been taken there as numerous as ever. This belated exhibition of virtue and vigilance, in the arrest of some foreigners complained about some time ago is neither complete nor sincere. Clean 'em all up, gentlemen, if you mean business.

The Adv. That Counted

Of all the campaign advertising put out by Mayor Murphy when he was a candidate two years ago, the most effective, the ad that got the greatest number of votes for the mayor was that which appeared in The Sun on Monday, Dec. 1, 1913. It read as follows: "To the Voters of Lowell: 'Sirs: If I am elected mayor I will make an honest effort to do my duty unhampered by any alliance, agreements or pledges, except those made openly to the public. 'I will hold the heads of my departments responsible for the duty imposed upon them and the laws will be enforced impartially with the aim of extending EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL AND SPECIAL PRIVILEGES TO NONE. 'A WILL NOT BE A CANDIDATE FOR A SECOND TERM. Because I realize the object of the present charter was to do away with the re-election of mayors and because I believe if unhampered with plans and labor necessary to bring about a continuation of the present charter, I can perform my official duties to better advantage, and because I purpose not only to go into office free of any ties and personal obligations, but I desire to remain so during my entire term. Under such conditions there should be no reason why, if elected, I cannot leave the office with as much respect as I enter it, and this is my truest ambition.'"

"Unhampered by pledges" is right.

SINKING OF THE ANCONA

U. S. MAY CALL ON FOREIGN MINISTER BURIAN TO EXPLAIN

ROME, Nov. 15.—Latest official reports indicate that 208 persons were lost in the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona by a submarine, 259 being saved out of a total of 507 on board.

U. S. FAILS TO GET DETAILS OF ANCONA CASE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Ambassador Thomas Nelson Page at Rome cables that his conferences at the Italian foreign office thus far have failed to develop the details or facts concerning the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona. The Italian government, according to Mr. Page, is having considerable difficulty establishing just what occurred when the vessel went down. An investigation is under way, however, and as soon as its results are known, Mr. Page will communicate it to Washington.

Secretary Lansing has been waiting to learn whether it was a German or Austrian submarine which destroyed the Ancona, and, therefore, has not instructed either Ambassador Gerard of Ambassador Penfield to call at the Berlin and Vienna foreign offices, respectively, to ask for information.

It appeared today, however, that in order to obtain officially such information as is in the possession of the German and Austrian governments, instructions might be sent to inquire of the admiralties.

The most connected official narrative of the rescue of survivors from the Ancona arrived today by cable from Ambassador Sharp at Paris, who transmitted telegrams to the French minister of marine from the prefect at Bizerta. They follow: "Nov. 7.—One hundred shipwrecked persons of which six wounded, from Ancona, torpedoed Sunday noon, brought to Bizerta."

Should it develop that the loss of lives in the destruction of the Ancona through a submarine attack gives the United States ground for action, President Wilson will send a vigorous note to the Vienna government demanding a prompt disavowal of the act, reparation and guarantees that the incident will not be repeated. But no action will be taken until definite information has been obtained from Ambassadors Page at Rome and Penfield at Vienna. The latter will make his representations to the Austro-Hungarian minister of foreign affairs, Baron Burian.

FIRE ON CROSS STREET

TWO TENEMENT HOUSE DAMAGED—FIRE STARTED FROM A DUMB STOVE

A two tenement house at 162-164 Cross street was damaged by fire early this afternoon. The fire started from the funnel of a dumb stove in the kitchen and burned through the partitions to the roof, causing considerable damage. Dense smoke filled the house and ruined part of the furniture. In order to extinguish the blaze it was necessary for the firemen to rip off a portion of the walls and ceiling. The building is owned by James Hutton and occupied by George Pataraon and Peter Sarkis.

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are probably brighter to-day than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dulled eyes and languid feelings make us wonder if they will ever grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch colds easily, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion for one month to enrich their blood and restore the body-forces to healthy action.

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine," simply a highly concentrated oil-food, without alcohol or harmful drugs. It cannot harm; it improves blood; it benefits lungs and strengthens the system. Your druggist has it—refuse substitutes. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

RID STOMACH OF GASES, SOURNESS, AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapiesin" Ends All Stomach Distress in Five Minutes

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs. Pape's Diapiesin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in relieving sick, sour, gassy stomachs; its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach troubles has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapiesin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 15.—The boldest burglary ever known here was made Saturday night, when the store of the P. W. A painter who had been at work on the Free street extension of the building left his ladder when he got through Saturday afternoon and the burglars used it to reach the roof, pulled it up after them, opened the skylight, lowered it to the floor below and entered the main store from the annex.

Their objective point was a small safe, and it is believed, they must have made a preliminary examination of the store, probably by customers, and so knew where to find it. But it was so situated as to be easily seen

Exhibit of Lowell Products Opens Tonight at the Casino—The Ticket

All is now in readiness for the most elaborate industrial show of Lowell-made goods ever conducted in this city and the first session of the exhibition will take place this evening. The officials of the Lowell board of trade, who are in charge of the event, have spent the greater part of the day at the Casino in Thordike street, where the show will be conducted, and this afternoon they reported all was in readiness for the opening session of Lowell's greatest exposition.

The exhibitors who were unable to put the finishing touch on their booths have done so today and this afternoon the large hall was cleared of all unnecessary things and the local manufacturers who have rented spaces are ready to receive the visitors, show them their various lines of goods and explain their manufacture.

A squad of police under the personal supervision of Supt. Welch is stationed at the Casino, and they will see that every visitor is made comfortable. Another feature with the show will be the presence of firemen with the necessary apparatus in case of a fire. These men will be under the direction of Chief E. P. Saunders.

The doors of the Casino will be thrown open at 6 o'clock this evening, and as previously announced, this evening will be devoted to the exhibitors and their friends and the members of the board of trade and the families. It is also a good thing to bear in mind that the tickets of the members of the board of trade are not transferable, but if a member wishes to take in the show again on another night, he may retain his ticket which will give him admission any time.

The doors of the Casino will be thrown open at 6 o'clock this evening, and at 8 o'clock Thordike street will be a scene of a two-hour concert. The visitors are requested to keep moving, more or less steadily, and not block the passageways.

There remains but very few tickets for the show, and those who have not yet secured their pastebords and who are involved in an accident on Rogers street are requested to get busy and call at the board of trade rooms. Over 61,000 tickets have been distributed so far and again the public is informed that the tickets will be good for the night stamped on the ticket and for no other night.

The doors of the Casino will be thrown open at 6 o'clock this evening, and at 8 o'clock Thordike street will be a scene of a two-hour concert. The visitors are requested to keep moving, more or less steadily, and not block the passageways.

They took the real safe to a corner of the store and put their hands on the door in the proper position with a small box behind it. They covered the safe with cloth and the force of the explosion was so weakened that it is believed very little noise was made when they blew it open and wrenched the front. They secured, as far as could be ascertained between $60 and $70.

Carried Revolver

When Theodore Katromadas was before the bar to answer to a complaint charging him with carrying a loaded revolver, he offered the excuse that he lost a sum of money when the Trades National bank failed and since that time has carried his bank roll in his belt. In order to protect the money he also carried the revolver.

Peter Tavoularis, a former president of the Greek community and another Market street business man, testified as to the defendant's good reputation both in the business and social world. Mr. Tavoularis testified that he knew Katromadas always carried between $500 and $1000 on his person, he being afraid to trust it in the banks.

Judge Enright said to the defendant: "That is no excuse for carrying this weapon. I advise you to put your money in a bank. Because one falls is no reason that others will." The court imposed a fine of $75, equal to the one imposed last week when a man arrested with Katromadas was found guilty.

James F. O'Neill was accused of drunkenness and larceny on last Saturday of one can valued at 10 cents from F. E. Nelson's 5 and 10 cent store. He pleaded guilty. He was fined $20 for the offense and refused an opportunity to pay the fine.

Fraudulently concealing property was the charge preferred against Chas. B. Green, by agreement of counsel, Messrs. William A. Hogan and George H. Altard, the case was continued one month without a plea.

Non-support James Hanley has not contributed anything toward the support of his three children for three years, according to the testimony of Mrs. Hanley when James was arraigned on a non-support charge. Although the defendant pleaded for another chance, his wife said she had no faith in his promise to do better and a four month sentence to the house of correction was ordered. During Hanley's stay in jail, his wife will receive $3 per week from the county.

Oversteering Autos John W. Dempsey and A. Henri Lamotte were called on continuance for driving their respective automobiles at an unreasonable rate of speed. In view of the fact that a civil settlement is under way, the cases were continued two weeks. Daniel J. Donahue ap-
